Testimonial resolution causes 'stir'

It was a testimonial resolution, commending Associated Newspapers (ANP) for its 3-month investigation into the fiscal activities of Communities United For Action Inc. (CUFA).

The Wayne County Board of Commission had all went according to schedule, was to have taken their standard "voice vote" on the matter. The document would have been incorporated into the official board minutes; ANP would have received the resolution for its records; and the matter would have been closed, forgotten until the next testimonial resolution was introduced.

But, in an unexpected departure from standard practice, ANP instead was attacked by the commissioners, and the resolution, introduced by County Commissioner William Joyner, became the subject of controversy and the topic of an investigation.

It was debated, discussed, and cursed by some. Then when a vote to table the resolution failed by a roll call vote of the commissioners, it was decided to defer the matter to the Human Resources Committee for further investigation.

It was one of the last decisions to be made by the commissioners prior to the Christmas holidays, and as Joyner views it "it was historic."

"It was such a simple resolution ... that's the sad part. I don't see how they could object," Joyner said.

"They tried to make it a racial issue and just about called you people racists. It was very frustrating."

According to Bernard Hanus, director of administration for the board, the last instance when a testimonial resolution was rejected, tabled or made the topic of controversy, occurred in 1972 when a memorial testimonial resolution was questioned by former commissioner Paul Silver.

"It was crazy then, and it's quite unbelievable now," Hanus said.

Maxine Young, the Detroit commissioner who led the attack on the resolution, refused to comment when contacted by ANP.

In the official vote, it was Rosemary Robinson, Ms. Young, Jarrette Simmons, Sam Turner, Clarence Young and Martha Scott, also Detroit commissioners, who registered votes against the resolution.

Ms. Young, according to Joyner and two other commissioners interviewed by ANP, reportedly was against signing the resolution because of its potential to aggravate her black constituency.

"It's sad it had to be a racial issue, because it just wasn't one," Joyner said.

Kay Beard, county commissioner representing Inkster, said she abstained from the vote because, in part she thought it was premature, and because she didn't want to be tangled up in a racial issue.

"I have to be careful what I say. I'm not pro-black, pro-white but pro-people," said Mrs. Beard, who noted the majority of her constituency is black.

Also surprised at the vote outcome, was Richard Manning, board chairman. So surprised was Manning that he said he felt a bit uneasy, having had already signed the proclamation, endorsing and sanctifying the resolution.

Manning said, despite the controversy created over the resolution, he does not want to be sidetracked and miss the "importance of bringing CUFA into the open."

"I think we have an obligation to not let this thing turn into a racial issue and lose the issue completely," said Manning. "What is needed is to open the whole can of worms and say where are we going with this."

It was Manning's suggestion to conduct public hearings to discuss the possibility of investigating CUFA on a grander scale. He suggested, for instance, referring the matter to the general government committee, one of four standing committees.

"That committee has overall jurisdiction, besides it has a good cross section of people and will not become racial," Manning said. "It's much better than sending it to the Human Resources Committee ... where the decision already has been made."

City officials defer 6 percent pay hike

By BOB AMEEN
ANP Staff Writer

The morning after being granted 6 percent salary raises by the City Council, elected Romulus officials Thursday deferred the increases in light of the city's poor financial condition.

Speaking as spokesman for himself, Mayor William M. Oakley and Treasurer Beverly McAnally, Clerk Leonard Folmar said: "We believe that to attract qualified people to elected positions in Romulus, fair and equitable wages must be paid. However, due to the economic condition of the city today, we are deferring the 6 percent salary raises until the city is in a more favorable economic position."

The 6 percent salary boost had been made this month by the Romulus Officers Compensation Commission, a 7-member body appointed by the mayor. If not acted upon in 30 days, state law stipulates that the recommended raises go into effect.

In discussion on the salary boost recommendation, Folmar spoke in favor, citing the high cost of living.

Councilman Ed Rush made a motion to deny the salary boost recommendation of the pay board. With council members Richard Yeramian, Mary Ann Banks, Gerry Canejo and Junior Block voting against the denial (for the salary boost), the motion was defeated 4-3. Rush, Jimmie Raspberry and Ray Cantrell voted for the denial.

A two-thirds vote of the City Council was required to defeat the motion.

In urging denial of the salary boosts, Rush stressed that the city is broke. He cited the mayor's earlier recommendation to council to reject bids for two diesel trucks with snow removal blades because of lack of funds.

"If we can't buy the trucks, how can we give our elected officials salary increases?" Rush asked.

Lending support to Rush's motion was Councilman Jimmie Raspberry, who spoke strongly in favor of the denial of salary hikes.

Current salaries for city officials are the mayor, $22,680 annually and clerk and treasurer, $17,280 annually.

Although the pay board recommended 6 percent salary increases for the mayor, clerk and treasurer, it bypassed council members. The council clerk now receives $3,500 a year while the remaining six members get $3,000 yearly.

On the day following the Wednesday night council session, Folmar, McAnally, Rush and Raspberry had further comments on the salary increase issue.

"I said last night that I didn't want the salary raise until the city is solvent," said the treasurer. She added, however, that she believes salaries of elected officials should not be allowed to become too low because qualified persons would be less inclined to run for office.

Rush commented: "The city treasurer needs a new cash register, but the city cannot afford to buy her a new one. So, how can we be in a position to give salary increases to our top elected city officials?"

Wednesday night Rush succeeded in getting a motion passed by council to "postpone indefinitely" the publication of a joint city-school newsletter now coming out on a quarterly basis. The newsletter is put together and edited by Jay Young, the city's public information officer.

Oakley subsequently got council approval to have the newsletter published, if city funds are not used. He did not indicate where he would get the money for the newsletter's publication.

Thursday, Rush told the Roman: "It's terrible! It's inexcusable for us to give city officials salary increases when we're broke!"

He cited the city's fire financial position, claiming the end of the Rush 'petitions' Diesel Allison for six new lease vehicles

Newly-elected Romulus Councilman Ed Rush isn't letting any grass grow under his feet.

Recently, he took action in view of his city's dire financial condition that quite possibly may induce officials of other communities with little money to emulate.

Rush wrote to the Detroit Diesel Allison Division of General Motors in Romulus asking the company to provide six new lease cars to the city at a cost of $1 each per year.

Explaining in his letter of Dec. 22, 1979 that "...the city is beset with a severe financial cash crisis...", Rush stressed that city cars need replacement, but that Romulus was unable to even purchase one new vehicle.

The councilman wrote: "The city in the past was most eager to help your corporation with tax abatement, but now finds itself in a position of need. I am sure that cooperation from your company would certainly make all the citizens of Romulus feel their past action to help you was well worth the effort involved."

As now permitted under state law, Romulus approved granting the huge plant a tax reduction for a specified period of years that would enable local expansion of several million dollars by GM.

Rush concluded his letter by requesting a "positive response" from Detroit Diesel.

Schools get aid payment

Public school systems in Van Buren Township, Romulus and Huron Township will share in state school aid, federal funds under Title I of the Elementary-Secondary Education Act of 1965, and federal vocational education funds for December and January.

State Sen. William Faust, in whose 13 senatorial district the three school districts are located, last week announced the following breakdown:

- Romulus, $772,967 in state aid, $8,995 in Title I, and $12,322 in VE;
- Huron, $568,461 in state aid, and $4,386 in Title I;
- Van Buren, $949,700 in state aid.

Civic groups lose in bid for funding

By CARRIE YOUNG
ANP Staff Writer

If the government shows an inability to administer programs, as some are claiming Communities United For Action Inc. (CUFA) has done, then where should those federal and state dollars be diverted to? The private sector?

But what if the private sector hasn't the capabilities to assume responsibility for those dollars ... then what?

Some are now saying the volunteer sector is the only logical place to turn to, and is much preferred over defunding agencies like CUFA.

A group of Jaycees from several Western Wayne County chapters were interviewed by Associated Newspapers (ANP), each contending that volunteer groups are geared in manpower, enthusiasm, commitment and organizational capabilities to administer federal programs designed to assist the low-income residents, but that without the monetary support, they say they are stymied.

"We understand the needs of the seniors in our area, and are trying to start programs to help them," said Inkster Jaycee President Dick Schreiber. "But the problem is we can't get the money that government can get."

Each Jaycee activist contended that if their volunteer groups could procure money equivalent to amounts obtained by community action agencies like CUFA, they could provide residents with more services for federal dollars spent.

"Money is a major issue for us. We believe that the government could be using its money more efficiently, but they're not. We could, but we're not eligible for most funds and we're not given the chance," Schreiber said.

The Michigan Jaycees' yearly revenue is approximately $1 million, with that money being raised by the Jaycees themselves, according to Joyner, who also is a Wayne County Commissioner representing nine Western Wayne County communities.

For two years, Joyner said, when he was active in the Livonia Jaycees, his local group attempted to obtain CETA funding, and still are in pursuit of those funds. Each year, the group is rejected funding requests, being ruled ineligible applicants.

"Here the Jaycees are ineligible.

We work because we're sincere. We don't get any money. We know the needs of the people, and yet we're refused," Joyner said. "It's just not fair."

But James Norman, director of the Bureau of Community Services (BCS) a division of the Michigan Department of Labor, disagrees.

Norman, whose agency monitors the activities of CUFA along with 30 other community action agencies in the state, said the Jaycees and similar volunteer organizations are not capable of administering money in a similar fashion as non-profit government organizations.

To Joyner's statements Norman reported: "That's malarky. They don't know how to handle funds, and that's the nicest thing I can say about them."

He said government has an elaborate system, a network of

Madonna students share meal with Romulus seniors

A 2-year friendship recently was renewed between Madonna College students and senior citizens from the Romulus Drop-In Center.

For the second year in a row, Romulus seniors were invited to dinner by students in a nutrition for the aging class, and sampled the cooking at the College Residence Hall.

Once again everyone seemed to enjoy themselves.

The dinner was a learning experience as well for both young and old. Many of the seniors said they were aware of proper nutrition while reminiscing about gardens they once tended.

"They must have known I was coming," said one senior, "there's white meat in my pot pie."

Another guest said: "I know I'm at college, they even have a diet menu."

Students agreed the dinner was a good opportunity to learn of food preferences of senior citizens. While some seniors chose traditional meals of meat, potatoes and dessert, weight watchers opted for meat, salads and jello.

But the learning involved more than nutrition as the generations mingled.

"Talking to my guest was like being with my grandmother again," said Karen Oswald. "Musical entertainment was provided before dinner so she and I did a polka together."

Maureen Henderson and Carla Chambers were delighted with Dorothy Icenogle's company.

"My grandparents died before I was born so my contact with senior citizens is rare," Maureen said. "We talked about Dottie's family, her political activities and the Depression."

"My image of a typical older person was shattered," explained Carla, who found seniors neither feeble nor chronic worriers, but rather good company.

Another Madonna student, Patricia Mayer commented: "It's great to see people with common interests regardless of age."

"The more contact I have with seniors, the more I understand how aging effects the lives, the better can bring dignity to the aged," offered one student.

The dinner was planned by the home economic and family life department along with the gerontology students at Madonna.

Madonna offers a "Volunteers to Assist the Aging" program, which will begin the second week of January. Hands-on experience is provided through visits with elderly residents of long-term care facilities or with the aged isolated in their homes.

In addition, guest speakers share their insights and experience with the class during five weekend seminars, beginning Jan. 11 and ending April 12. Partial tuition waivers are awarded to volunteers with four college credits granted upon completion of the course.

Applications still are being accepted. Call 591-5094 for more information.

Civic groups lose in bid for funding federal guidelines and rules that surpass any volunteer organization, as well as sophisticated programs which only result from years of operating those programs.

The Jaycees, said Norman, are without a certified accounting system, a merit system for employment and without an outreach to the poor program, rendering that group ineligible for funds.

"They can request all they want, but they ain't getting nothing," Norman said. "We have experience. We have 10 pages of guidelines. We understand the complex problems. They don't. Experience does not mean weekend cleanups or selling candy for crippled kids."

Norman admitted, however, that in his two years at the BCS the community action agencies he monitors are not always capable of meeting the guidelines and rules, nor have they proven able to bring direct services to the poor as intended.

Hesaid ANP's 4-part investigation into the fiscal and program activities of CUFA was "right on target", when it learned and reported on misuse of CUFA money, faltering programs and alleged falsified recordings of low-income residents reportedly having been serviced by CUFA.

"But, you see, the system is behind us...not them (the Jaycees)," Norman said.

The system apparently wasn't behind the Wayne Jaycees this year when that group came to the aid of a Wayne resident who was facing the threat of a gas shut-off.

In fact, the system had failed that senior and ignored the Jaycees.

"This senior needed help from CUFA, but for a year was refused help. Then it was almost too late. We stepped in and helped her," said Caincross.

Caincross said a Wayne senior was discovered heating her home with two portable heaters. She was without gas.

The Jaycees intervened and paid more than $110 for 125 gallons of the fuel, helping her to make it through the winter season without total reliance on the portable heaters.

That local chapter also responded to the needs of seniors without transportation, food, in need of their homes to be insulated against severe weather conditions, and with a yearly budget of about $24,000 raised through Jaycee efforts, they are able to accomplish a part of their goals.

But we'd like to do more. We're doing for people, but we're getting shafted because we have to pay ourselves for everything we want to do," Caincross said.

"You'd think somewhere along the line we'd get help."

Joyner believes the Jaycees are accomplishing tasks with little or no funding that the bureaucrats have proven incapable of doing, even with the necessary funding.

"The bureaucrats, though, think they own the world. The bottomline is the Jaycees right now are doing what the bureaucrats can't do, but the bureaucrats know a good thing and don't want to funnel the money anywhere but to themselves," Joyner said. "It's a losing battle."

If Schreiber and his fellow volunteers had their way, however, they'd be given the chance to demonstrate their capabilities.

"The Jaycees motto is, 'If the Jaycees are given the chance, they can move mountains'."

City officials defer 6 percent pay hike

fiscal year would see Romulus come out short to the tune of $1 million or more.

Adding to his statement Thursday in turning down salary boosts for the city's three elected officials, Folmar defended council members who supported the pay board's recommendation.

"Those council members voting against the denial did so because they felt a fair and equitable wage for elected city officials is in the best interests of the community."

In like measure, the clerk also defended the vote of the three council members who voted for the salary denial.

"We (mayor, clerk and treasurer) are sensitive to those who voted for the salary increase denial. It was one of the factors we considered in deferring the salary raises now."

Thursday Raspberry said the mayor was getting the 6 percent salary boost not long after he had turned down a 7 percent salary raise for the city's three foremen in contract talks now going on. He said the matter now was in mediation.

"The 6 percent salary raises were not budgeted in the city budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year," Raspberry contended.

He explained that prior to the start of this fiscal year—July 1, 1979—the mayor had appointed a committee to make salary recommendations for city department heads and non-union personnel. The committee was made up of Oakley, council member McAnally, council member Mary Carter and council member Gerry Canejo.

Raspberry said the mayor and other committee members recommended a 7 percent salary boost for city employees making under $15,000 annually and a 5 percent salary jump for those making more than $15,000 yearly.

"Yet, the mayor was going to accept a 6 percent salary increase for himself after he had announced a cutback on city expenditures due to the current cash crisis," Raspberry said.

Raspberry cited a statement made Wednesday night by the treasurer which revealed that a third of the city's accounts now show "a zero balance."

ANP publisher to attend White House conference

Sandwiched between the big business and government, the small businesses across the country are slowly being squeezed out of existence.

And to identify the problems and hopefully find solutions for them, the White House will convene a Conference on Small Business which will be held in Washington, Jan. 13-17.

David J. Willett, Publisher of The Associated Newspapers which includes Belleville Enterprise, Romulus Roman, The Canton Eagle, Inkster Ledger-Star, The Westland Eagle and The Wayne Eagle, will be one of 2,100 delegates who will attend the conference.

The delegates will spend four days deliberating issues in several areas, including: Capital Formation and Retention, Government Regulation and Paperwork, Women in Business, Minority Business Development, International Trade, Inflation, Economic Policy, and Government Programs, Federal Procurement, Veterans in Business, Energy, Innovation and Technology, Entrepreneurial Education and Management Assistance.

Obviously from the above agenda, the delegates will be busy. But in addition to their busy schedule, they will also hear a number of distinguished speakers addressing the subject of the climate for the small business in America.

President Carter is scheduled to deliver the opening address on Sunday, Jan. 13. Subsequent speakers will include William Miller, secretary of treasury; Alfred Kahn, assistant to the President on inflation; and Luther Hodges Jr., acting secretary of commerce.

The final day of the conference, delegates will vote on resolutions proposed by various theme areas. Their final recommendations will include proposals that may be enacted in three separate ways: Executive Orders issued by the President, legislation passed by Congress, and initiatives taken by the private sector.

Of the 2,100 delegates eligible to attend the 1980 conference, a clear majority were democratically elected at 57 field meetings held in all parts of the country to gather information and ideas from the broad cross-section of the U.S. small business community.

In addition, each state Governor, U.S. Senator and member of the U.S. House of Representatives were allowed to appoint one delegate. A limited number of delegates—approximately 200—were appointed by the Executive Branch.

The conference has been convened at a time when the small business

Of the total number of non-farm businesses, 10.4 million (96.4 percent) are considered "small" by the Small Business Administration's small business size standards. Small business accounted for 43 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP) and provides 58 percent of the U.S. business employment (excluding farms).

Small business directly or indirectly provides the livelihood of over 100 million Americans, creates more jobs than any other sector of the economy and is responsible for more than 50 percent of all innovation.

Christmas program termed 'successful'

A standing room only audience of parents and school personnel was treated to what Principal Harold Cannon called "a successful Christmas program" recently at Mt. Pleasant Elementary School in Romulus.

Dick Kruse, junior high band director and head of elementary and secondary music, told the audience the program was one of the "best prepared" in his 14 years of experience.

Kruse commended Mrs. Stacia Schalti, elementary instrumental music teacher, and parents of participating pupils for a job well done.

Schalti directed a band, which opened Monday night's program, made up of students from Hayti, Merriman and Mt. Pleasant elementary schools.

Next on the program was the singing of Christmas carols by the kindergarten class of Mrs. Debra Street. Choral readings were delivered by the first grade class of Mrs. Rose Foster and the second and third grade classes of Mrs. Barbara Jaszcz.

A wrap-up of information on Christmas around the world was presented next by the lower grade emotionally impaired class of Ms. Terri Kamensky and the third grade class of Ms. Wendy Serecombe.

The famous holiday poem, "Twas the Night Before Christmas", was delivered by Tom Britt, fourth grader in Mrs. Bettie McDonald's class.

Students in Mrs. McDonald's fourth and fifth grade class and those from Mrs. Algertha Leonard's fourth grade class presented their rendition of "The Twelve Days Before Christmas".

Council changes rules

The recent explosion and fire at a gasoline storage tank farm in Taylor has made the City Council in neighboring Romulus sit up and take notice.

Last Wednesday night, a motion by Councilman Ed Rush for more stringent safety requirements for gasoline storage facilities in the city was approved by the City Council.

The motion directed the city attorney to contact the state fire marshal, the city of Taylor, and the Romulus fire chief to gather information needed to draft a new city ordinance to put more strict safety measures on local gasoline storage tanks.

Rush called attention to the many gasoline storage facilities on Goddard and Wick roads in Romulus.

IRS wants you!

Undelivered refunds seek their 'owners'

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) wants you... Glenda Barksdale of Inkster, Stanley Borden of Canton Township and a list of other area residents who stand to benefit by answering the call.

According to IRS officials, there are a good number of undelivered federal tax refund checks of Michigan taxpayers, many in the Western Wayne County area, that are waiting to be claimed.

Many of these checks, according to the IRS, remain undelivered because taxpayers have moved and left no forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service.

Taxpayers who have not changed addresses, but still have not received their tax refunds should check with IRS as soon as possible, officials said, because refund delays can also be caused by lost or stolen checks. In these cases, the IRS can put tracers on the missing checks.

Some refunds may be delayed because of errors, or omissions, on tax returns. Affected taxpayers in these instances should follow the instructions received from the IRS in order to speed up issuance of their checks.

The IRS stressed that in all refund inquiries, the taxpayer should provide name and address as they appear on the return, the actual name and address if different, the Social Security numbers, and the type of form filed.

Below is a list of individuals entitled to a tax refund for 1978 and or a prior year. Persons named on the list are urged to contact the IRS at 226-7288.

Breaking the ice

Lakes spawn communities of winter fishermen

When winter's blast of freezing temperatures seals over Michigan's inland waters, thousands of hardy souls venture from their cozy confines to "break the ice" for another go-around at cold-weather fishing.

Almost overnight, hundreds of little communities spring up on lakes and bays, populated by a breed of rugged sportsmen and women.

Bone-chilling as the weather may be, these small settlements are hot spots for action as their residents spud holes in the ice, jiggle an ice fly for panfish, set tip-ups for walleye, pike or lake trout, or toss a spear at a northern or muskie.

All this, plus the camaraderie of the folks "next door", keeps calling fishermen back to their shanty towns until the spring thaw sets in.

There are three basic ways to go about ice fishing—with hand lines, tip-ups, or spears. The first two are by far the most popular, probably because they are the simplest and can be used for taking just about every kind of fish on Michigan's legal catch list during the winter.

Spear fishing is a more specialized sport, which puts a premium on patience and accuracy. Generally, all three types of fishing are best from around dawn until mid-morning and again from late afternoon to sundown. However, spearing action usually holds up throughout the day. Early, late, or in between, get out whenever you have the chance.

Another general thing to keep in mind is that fish become rather sluggish during the winter, and move around less than in the summer. So it stands to reason that the more holes you cut and try, the better your chances for locating fish.

In getting geared up, you'll want a fiber-glass rod 3 to 5 feet long. A limber rod usually is preferred for catching panfish and trout and a stiff rod, which aids a firmer setting of the hook, for pike, walleye and muskie.

If you're going after large trout or other big fish, a good free running reel, instead of the usual line-winding cleat, is a must. It will allow you to "play" your fish better. Also, when used without a bobber, this reel will let you change your fishing depth with the twist of a finger.

Some fishermen substitute for the bobber by curling part of the line around their finger to get the "message" when they have a bite.

Fishermen who don't care for reels keep their excess line from freezing and out of the way by winding it around two L-screws which are placed about 12 inches apart on the wooden handles of their rods.

Choice in the strength of lines also varies, with not over 4-pound test recommended for best action on bluegills, other panfish, brown and rainbow trout. Some sportsmen who are angling specifically for pike or muskies, have lines that go as high as 8-12 pound test. Neglecting to use light lines probably is the most frequent mistake of unsuccessful fishermen. Occasionally, fish will break the lighter line, but with some finesse, you can land most fish and are certain to have more bites. One thing ice fishermen are unanimous about is that the line should be transparent monofilament.

When it comes to the bobber, the smaller the better, as long as it's big enough to stay afloat. Fish generally don't bite as eagerly in the winter as during the summer. Thus, the float buoyancy and lure weight should be balanced so the slightest nibble will sink the bobber and offer minimum resistance to the fish. If the float is to buoyant, fish often spit out the bait.

Assuming for the moment that you've picked the right baits and hooks, the strategy in hand line fishing is pretty simple. You just "bob" or "jig" your line with a short up-and-down motion to attract fish to your bait. Stop every couple of minutes. This will enable you to feel a bite, and give fish a better crack at your offerings.

Tip-ups, equipped with reels and flags, are used mostly for larger fish: northern pike, walleyes, muskies, and lake trout. They are cheap to buy or easy to make. Most of those on the market are made to fold up for compact handling. There's no big trick to operating tip-ups; they are merely baited and set out. When a fish bites, the flag flies up and the fun begins. The rest is up to the fishermen, and he goes to it by giving his line a solid jerk, setting the hook in the fish.

Next, he pulls the line in rapidly, hand over hand. When he has the fish near the hole, it's time to play it careful. In their haste, anglers most frequently lose their catches at this point by trying to get the fish on the ice before it is ready. Be prepared on the violent surges to let the line slip through your fingers—but always with some tension.

As you may have guessed, tip-ups are especially nice to have in colder weather when it's hard to stand guard over fishing holes for a long period of time. Once they are set out, the fisherman can retire to a warm shanty and wait for the action to pop. Or, for those who like variety in their sport, tip-ups give them a chance to also try their luck at hand line fishing.

An absolute "must" when spearing is a good dark shanty which eliminates the chance of fish seeing you and being spooked. If you have a stove, make sure that the glow from it is blocked. The shanty itself should be sturdily built so the sound from your movements inside will not travel through the ice.

As for the fisherman, he should wear dark clothes and gloves so he won't tip himself off to his underwater targets.

For accuracy's sake, use a spear that is weighted. Those that aren't have to be thrown too hard and this tends to make them angle off course. Overall weight of the spear depends upon the fisherman's tastes and the kind of fish he's going after. The spear, used on whopping-sized sturgeon may weigh as much as 15-18 pounds.

Whatever the weight, the spear you'll want will have seven to nine strong lines and about a 7-foot handle with a rope attached so you won't lose it. In attaching the rope, here's a little trick which sometimes may be the difference between landing a fish and losing it. Run your rope through a cotterpin on the spear's handle down to the lines where it is tied fast or secured with a metal ring.

When you hit the mark and start to haul the fish in, a slight jerk pulls the cotterpin out and lets you lift the spear with the lines up. If the fish is not speared very well, this helps to keep it on the lines instead of giving it a chance to work free.

Getting back to the preliminaries, the element of surprise can't be overstressed as a key to successful spear fishing. So, in getting poised for action, lower your spear into the water before you release it.

Otherwise, it will make a loud plunging sound when it hits the water, and alert the fish in time to let it dart away to safety.

Naturally, before you can test any of the things we've been talking about, there is the small matter of making a hole in the ice. Many veteran fishermen say the Swedish type auger can't be beat for this, especially when the ice is 12 inches thick or more. Others swear by their trusty spuds, and some favor axes. It's your choice. Of course, the auger isn't designed for the type of hole that spear fishermen need.

Whatever tool you pick, keep it sharp or by the time the hole is made, you may be too tuckered to enjoy your fishing.

Safe ice fishing begins by sizing up conditions on your lake before carting shanties and other paraphernalia onto the ice. A good place to start checking lakes is right around the shore. If shoreline ice is squishy or broken up, it's a pretty good bet that the lake is still not safe.

Caught you

When winter's blast of freezing temperatures seals over the state's inland waters, thousands of hardy souls will venture from their snug and cozy homes to "break the ice" for another bout of cold-weather fishing. For some it can be a chilling experience, for others the nibble of a nosy bluegill or the quick tug that indicates it's a lake trout makes it all the more exciting and warming to the soul.

'Be Trim' handles yo-yo syndrome of weight loss

Dealing with the "yo-yo syndrome" and "pigging out" are among the goals of "Be Trim," a new eating management program now available to the public through the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital Education Center.

"Our program tries to ease participants into life-style changes that will lead to gradual, permanent weight loss," explained Bobbie Schwartz, developer of "Be Trim."

She said elements of "Be Trim" grew from six years of teaching other weight-control programs in Washtenaw County.

"We de-emphasize dieting because it is an 'off and on' approach that usually results in weight being off and on—the yo-yo syndrome," she noted.

Altering attitudes towards eating also is a major thrust.

"The tendency to think of foods in moral terms, as 'good' and 'bad,' promotes guilty feelings at overeating, and excessive guilt can trigger a series of overeating binges," she said. "We try to eliminate guilt and encourage the idea that all foods are permissible, one must simply learn to control the quantity. When this idea is absorbed, it becomes far more likely that overeating binges, or 'pig outs,' will be isolated events."

Ms. Schwartz noted that "Be Trim" previously has been available only to employees of the Catherine McAuley Health Center (CMHC), which includes St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Mercywood Neuro-Psychiatric Hospital, and the Maple Medical Center.

"Most of our employee participants have lost about a pound per week, which is exactly the loss rate that most doctors recommend," she reported.

"Be Trim," which is seeking 150 participants from the general public, is part of CMHC's effort to expand the health awareness and promotion programs of its units.

In addition to Ms. Schwartz, program coordinators for "Be Trim" include Anne Quigley, patient education coordinator, Lois Sczomak, clinical dietitian, both of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

One of several free informational meetings on Jan. 8, 9, and 10 at the Education Center of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital must be attended to enroll in the 10 week, $50 "Be Trim" program.

To register for one of the free meetings, call 572-3023 from 8 to 11 a.m. and 572-3112 from 4 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 769-4667 from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

What's for lunch?

After a 2-week holiday vacation, students will be returning to school next week, and cafeterias will be ready, serving up such entrees as Italian lasagna, oven-fried clams and baked chicken cannaloni.

In the family-style luncheon programs at Quirk, Savage, West Willow, Elwell and Tyler Elementary schools the menu Monday will be hot dogs on buns, baked beans, tossed salads with French dressing, pineapple or peaches, chilly things and milk, followed by a lineup of cold meat and cheese submarine sandwiches, juice, fruit gelatin, cookies and milk on Tuesday.

Next Wednesdays youngsters will be dining on lasagna, cauliflower, chopped broccoli, hot garlic bread, fruit gelatin, pudding and milk, while slated for next Thursday will be a menu of pizza, buttered whole carrots, tossed salads with Italian dressing, fruit cocktail, cake and milk.

Rounding out the week will be a menu of oven fried clams or shrimp, tator tots, cole slaw, celery and carrot sticks, pineapple juice, lemon drink, pudding and milk.

In the remaining elementary schools the menu Monday will be juice, cheeseburgers on buns, tator rounds, chilly things and milk.

Tuesday the cafeterias will be serving soup, sloppy joes on buns, oven french fries, cookies and milk, while on tap for next Wednesday will be lasagna, brussel sprouts or broccoli, hot garlic bread and butter, fruit gelatin and milk.

Next Thursday's menu will include juice, pizza, vegetable, salad or cole slaw, fruit gelatin, pudding and milk, while topping off the week will be a menu of soup and crackers, fish on buns with tartar sauce, tator rounds, gelatin and milk.

In the junior and senior schools the menu Monday will be hamburgers on buns or Coney Island foot-long, soup and crackers, french fries, pears and milk, while slated for Tuesday is a menu of pizza or bologna and American cheese club sandwiches, juice, french fries, fruit gelatin, tator rounds, tossed salads with dressing and milk.

Next Wednesday the menu will include spaghetti with meat sauce or chopped steak submarine sandwiches, soup and crackers, fruit gelatin, tator rounds, tossed salads with dressing and milk.

Next Thursday students will be dining on hot dogs or baked chicken cannaloni with tomato sauce, juice, corn, french fries, peaches, cookies and milk, while next Friday the cafeterias will be serving fish on buns or shrimp on buns, juice, green beans, french fries, cole slaw and milk.

Bird count is Saturday

The fourth annual "Kensington Park's New Year's Bird Count" will be held at the nature center of Kensington Metropark on Jan. 5, starting at 8 a.m.

The purpose of the Bird Count, an annual event, is to census the birds of Kensington Metropark.

Naturalists advise participants to meet at the nature center, bring binoculars, and a lunch (if you plan to stay beyond noon) and dress for the weather.

Advance registration is required. For registration or information, contact the nature center at Kensington Metropark at 685-1561 (Milford).

SEMTA, D-DOT merge

A comprehensive regional transportation system and a merger with the Detroit-Department of Transportation have both been approved by the board of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA).

The issue of merger had been one of the major stumbling blocks to the final selection of a regional system. Details of the merger were ironed out between the SEMTA board and Detroit Mayor Coleman A. Young only a few days before the Dec. 18 deadline the board had set for itself as the date to select a regional transit plan.

The plan, adopted by an 11-vote majority of the 15-member SEMTA Board, includes an approximately 12.8-mile light rail line which would operate from downtown Detroit to 10 Mile Road — some 8.2 miles of the system, reaching from downtown Detroit to Six Mile Road, would be subsurface. The plan also includes an additional 315 regular buses to be used in local and express service; more than 300 additional small buses to be used for general public dial-a-ride and for special elderly and handicapped service; expanded commuter rail service on the existing Pontiac to Detroit line, all-day service between Ann Arbor and Detroit and new peak-hour service between Mt. Clemens and Detroit; and an approximately 3-mile people mover system in the Detroit central business district.

The plan chosen by the board was a variation of one of seven improvement plans under consideration. The board chose the plan labeled "X-1"; however, they extended the light rail line in the original X-1 plan by approximately 2 miles.

The cost of the original X-1 (including all service expansion) was $1.44 billion. The extension is expected to add approximately $75 million to that total.

A resolution to merge SEMTA and the Detroit-Department of Transportation was adopted unanimously. The resolution reads in part that "SEMTA and the City of Detroit (will) merge into a single region-wide public transportation system, governed by a policy board that would protect the interests of all parties and operating under the direction of a single general manager."

The resolution also assures that the city shall get fair value for its system, and the employees will be assured of protection for their jobs, wages, benefits and working conditions. The resolution also assures that the service in the City of Detroit shall be restored to a minimum of that provided in 1976, before city service reductions.

The resolution specifies that the merger issue be submitted to the people of Detroit for a vote in or before 1982. However, according to SEMTA General Manager Larry E. Salci: "The referendum is, of course, important, but at this point we do not foresee any major opposition on the part of Detroit citizens to a merger. The citizens of Detroit, like other citizens of this region, have expressed an overwhelming desire for improved transit services, and that can best be accomplished by one coordinated system.

SEMTA currently maintains a purchase of service agreement with D-DOT which has provided the necessary funding for the City to continue its operations.

Also, in or before 1982, a taxation proposal to fund operating deficits of the regional system will be presented to the voters of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Although SEMTA covers a 7-county area, the services are concentrated in these three counties. Details of the taxation proposal have yet to be worked out.

The next step in the development of the selected regional plan is submittal of that plan to the Michigan State Legislature for approval of the 20 percent local share for preliminary engineering. Once the local share is assured, the plan will then be submitted to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for approval of the 80 percent federal share for preliminary engineering.

Commissioners reject hiring of a county manager

The proposed hiring of a management specialist conceived to temporarily administer Wayne County government has been turned down by the County Board of Commissioners.

By a vote of 13-11, the commissioners rejected the idea of Commissioner Arthur M. Carter during their meeting Dec. 20. The defeat was despite approval 14-6 a week before by the Ways and Means Committee, consisting of all 27 members of the board.

Testimony against the measure was led by Commissioners James J. Rashid of Dearborn, Kay L. Beard of Inkster and Alex Pilch, also of Dearborn.

Rashid called the proposal "a waste of time" and a potential "waste of somebody else's money." Noting that the proposal calls for funding from an independent, outside source, Rashid said: "I'm not opposed if someone wants to give us money, but if somebody does, let's use it for something else, something worthwhile."

He said the proposed consultant could not possibly conduct an independent audit, could not recommend more effective cost reduction that the board already has, and would be unable to maintain a daily account of expenses, and all ideas expressed in the Carter proposal.

In addition, Rashid said the proposal would duplicate or conflict with the reason for formation of the County Efficiency Task Force. The task force is a prestigious 25-member group of private citizens representing business, labor, education, government and various civic organizations throughout the county.

Commissioner Beard also argued in favor of waiting for the task force report, saying that appointment consulting authority beforehand would insult a "distinguished panel."

Pilch said the proposal was vague

in reference to funding from outside sources.

"All the ideas supposed in the proposal are our responsibility. Let's exercise it."

During Egyptian tour

Delegation gets to know Middle East

Eighty metropolitan area citizens, comprising a special delegation fostered by Wayne County Community College, has embarked on a 14-day tour of Egypt.

The WCCC excursion, which began Dec. 28, is focusing on meetings by local citizenry with their counterparts in Egyptian fields of business, education, labor, economics and the arts.

"The Egyptian tour is an historic event, a rare combination of efforts, including a variety of representatives from our communities and professional walks of life" said Dr. Reginald Wilson, president of WCCC. "It will be an exercise in observing a different life style and culture, and an excellent opportunity for us to better know a portion of the Middle Eastern experience."

"We are especially pleased that the college will also be making formal presentations reflecting its institutional systems of operation. A significant goal of this trip will be to honor recent requests by Egyptian educators to highlight aspects of management and academic offerings presently available through WCCC as a national educational model."

Signifying what is truly an expanding "world view" of WCCC interests, the college's executive vice-president, Dr. Mostafa M. Afr, himself an Egyptian by birth, has facilitated the tour in conjunction with Egypt's Supreme Council for Higher Education. He foresees the magnitude of the January tour to provide future impetus for further international ventures by the college. Metropolitan area participants in the Wayne County Community College Egyptian Trip include students, homemakers, artists, teachers, educational administrators and corporate representatives from several major companies.

Joining key WCC administrators at its first management-oriented seminar in Egypt, at Cairo's Ain Shams University, was the Systems and Computer Technology Corporation (SCT), represented by its president and founder, Frederick A. Gross.

A second management seminar at Cairo University emphasized the application of management organization systems designed specifically for higher education. Dr. Wilson spoke on "The Role of the Community College in the United States," providing an overview of the philosophy and mission of community college institutions in American education. Seminar topics at Cairo University included presentations by Dr. Afr, "Management of Education Resources" and "Management Organization Systems Technique: (MOST)," delivered by Dr. Milan M. Chonich, director of development, and Steven M. Racine, director of budget and management.

Members of the college tour enrolled in a special seminar course offered for credit by the institution. The seminar, conducted by Dr. Wilson, Dr. Afr and Kandi Baba Kumasi, dealt with aspects of Egyptian culture, archeology and a historical "world-view", based upon group experiences acquired on the seminar-tour.

"Through an excursion into the practical, everyday world of Egypt, we hope to promote a better mutual understanding among our people" said Dr. Afr. "The schools and farms, the businesses, the bazars, the factories, all of these will become settings as vital to our trip's itinerary as the majestic sites for which Egypt is famous." To document the land-mark expedition, the college is being joined by the local Public Broadcasting System affiliate, WTVS Television (Channel 56) which will assist in co-producing a film reflecting the 14-day experience. Included among the special events earmarked for college tour participants are proposed meetings with President Anwar Sadat, Madame Sadat, and high-ranking officials of the Egyptian Government representing Education, Business and Cultural Affairs. "As an educational institution, Wayne County Community College prizes this means of learning from as well as exchanging ideas and philosophies with the people of Egypt" Dr. Wilson said.

Administration rules change would aid mobile homeowners

Mobile home park tenants will get some extra protection in their lease agreements with park operators, if proposed changes in the Department of Commerce-Mobile Home Commission's rules survive the administrative rules process. Changes in the rules, which will be the topic of a public hearing in Lansing Jan. 8, would require park management to offer leases to tenants for a minimum of one year. Current commission rules set the minimum at six months. The proposed changes would also mandate that all mobile home sales under the commission's jurisdiction have a 5-day cooling-off period to give purchasers time to withdraw their offer. Currently, only sales of new mobile homes carry this stipulation.

Also for consideration at the hearing is a requirement that park management maintain an inventory checklist to determine damages incurred by tenants from the beginning to the end of their tenancy. After public hearings administrative rules must be approved by the attorney general and the Joint Legislative Committee on Administrative Rules. The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the commission offices, Corporation and Securities Bureau, 6546 Mercantile Way. Copies of the proposed changes are available from the Michigan Department of Commerce, Corporation and Securities Bureau, Mobile Home Division, P.O. Box 30222, Lansing 48909.

Navy offers $2,000 bonus

The Department of the Navy recently instituted a $2,000 bonus for new recruits who enlist in the Navy's nuclear power training program. This policy, effective Dec. 10, 1979, is designed to increase appeal for the Navy's top priority program by offering high school graduates between 17 and 24 career opportunities as electronics technicians, mechanics and electricians. More than half the technicians and engineers presently employed at civilian nuclear plants received their initial training in the Navy's nuclear power program. Commander Kenneth E. Galkin, executive officer of the Navy Recruiting District Detroit, expolained: "Many nuclear-qualified applicants choose other training programs. A $2,000 bonus will persuade these highly qualified individuals to consider the nuclear field more closely." Enlistment in the Navy's nuclear field entails a 6-year active duty obligation, with approximately two years of technical training. The bonus will be paid upon completion of the professional curriculum.

Earth reaches nearest point to sun this month

The year 1980 begins with the earth at its closest point to the sun and with two bright star clusters in view, says University of Michigan astronomy Professor Richard G. Teske.

"On Jan. 3, the earth, traveling along its ellipse-shaped orbit around the sun, will pass that place in the orbit that lies nearest the sun. We arrive at this point each year in early January," he said. "Six months later, in early July, the earth is at the place on its elliptical path that is farthest from the sun. The difference in the earth-sun distance between the two dates is more than three million miles."

Also in January, Teske noted, two star clusters, the Pleiades and the Hyades, may easily be seen in the constellation Taurus.

According to Greek mythology, the seven Pleiades and seven Hyades were half-sisters, the children of Atlas. Zeus rewarded the Hyades, entrusted with the care of the infant Bacchus, by giving them a place in the heavens. But their sisters, the Pleiades, gained a place in the sky when they were transformed by Zeus into celestial doves to save them from pursuit by the giant Orion.

Nearly overhead in mid-evening, the Pleiades are the best known cluster in the heavens, Teske added.

"To the naked eye, they appear as a compact group of six or seven stars. With binoculars, more than two dozen come into view. Lying about 400 light years from the sun, the cluster actually contains more than 150 stars, most of them invisible except in larger telescopes."

The U-M astronomer explained that the naked-eye stars of the Pleiades are examples of stars that rotate at very high speeds, spinning nearly 100 times faster than does the sun, a slowly rotating star which takes about 25 days to turn once upon its axis.

"The force exerted by their fast spin causes the bright Pleiades stars to bulge prominently at their equators. In fact, one of the Pleiades actually appears to be shedding gas because of its great rotational speed," Teske said.

"The entire Pleiades cluster is enveloped by a tenuous cosmic cloud of great extent, composed of gas atoms and minute flecks of icy materials. Photographs of the region show that the cloud shines by starlight reflected from the tiny particles in it, just as street-lamps and shopping center lights illuminate fog and low-lying clouds here on earth."

To the southeast of the Pleiades, Teske pointed out the V-shaped Hyades.

"Marking the Bull's head in Taurus, the group is the nearest to the sun of all the clusters, with the single exception of the Ursa Major cluster to which five Big Dipper stars belong."

The Hyades are dominated by the bright, reddish star Aldebaran, which is not a true member of the cluster.

"Aldebaran is an accidental intruder which lies half-way between the Hyades and ourselves," he explained.

Both the Pleiades and Hyades are examples of star groups called

"open clusters," which remain bound together through the mutual gravitational pull of their members. Although about 1,000 such clusters are known, "astronomers suspect that there may be nearly 20 times that many in our galaxy that remain undiscovered."

"All the member stars of a cluster have had a common origin and share a common birth date. By comparing their characteristic brightnesses and colors with computer calculations, astronomers can determine the group's age," Teske said. "It is found that the Pleiades cluster is youthful by cosmic standards, being hardly more than fifty million years old, while the Hyades have an age 10 times that. By comparison our sun is indeed a senior citizen, with an age of four and a half billion years."

State history taught

The history of the State of Michigan is a subject long neglected in standard curricula on both college and high school levels. Wayne County Community College, however, has offered the course on a fairly regular basis. In fact, in this coming winter term, it will be taught at its Downriver Center in Taylor. The instructor will be Tom Jones of the Detroit Historical Museum.

Having done graduate work at the University of Michigan, specializing in local history, Jones has taught Michigan History at other centers of the college, as well as at Washtenaw Community College and Marygrove College.

Supplementing his presentations with slides, films, and field trips, Jones attempts to explain the present in terms of the past and the national historical events from the viewpoint of the local level.

"Local history has become extremely popular lately, and I have noticed this interest reflected in the students who sign up for the class."

Michigan History will be offered every Saturday from 8 to 11 a.m., starting Jan. 12, and lasting 16 weeks. Registration for the class is being offered at the Downriver Center on Northline Road between Telegraph and Allen Road in Taylor. Call 287-2860. Tuition is $16 per credit hour and free for senior citizens.

Registration for the class can be completed between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. Jan. 3-5, from 1 to 8 p.m. Jan. 7-11 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 12. The course offers 3 credit hours.

The new Mormon controversy

I don't know what disciplinary action — if any — the Catholic Church would take against a Catholic who went around speaking in favor of abortion.

What if, in addition to taking a pro-abortion stance in public, he or she denounced the Catholic Church for opposing abortion? Would that person be officially silenced? Or excommunicated?

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 3
Read 2 Corinthians 1:3-7

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matthew 28:20)

Mrs. Jones is a very old lady who had lost her only remaining child and now alone in the world. I was trying to comfort her when I remembered a game we had played with our two children when they were small.

We had moved to a city far from where the children had friends and relatives. For a while they could not seem to find friends and felt lost. We started making a list of those we knew loved and missed them. We would say, "Let's count the people you love and those who love you. There's David and Bill and Aunt Ruth." We named all we could until we built up to the end with the most important: "Best of all, God loves you!"

The sense of security the children gained by pulling the warm blanket of human love about them and covering it with God's love calmed their troubled hearts.

Mrs. Jones and I played the game. We listed the nurses and the church circle ladies, then reached the final point together: "And best of all, God loves you." She beamed.

As I left I realized that God is the one who will never leave us, even to the end.

PRAYER: Be with us, Father, so that even when things seem bleak, we can feel Your comforting hand upon us. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: No one who knows Jesus is friendless.

Witnesses gather

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York recently sponsored a 2-day regional assembly for Jehovah's Witnesses at the group's assembly hall in Detroit.

Some 140 delegates from the Inkster East Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses and upwards of 1,007 delegates from the Detroit, Westland, and Garden City areas attended the sessions.

Assemblies of this type are held semi-annually for the express purpose of training Jehovah's Witnesses and aiding them to become more productive in their christian activities.

The 2-day program, which was opened to the public, included a variety of talks on Bible subjects.

The theme scripture stressed repeatedly in its various aspects throughout the assembly was taken from John 15:8 in the Bible where Jesus himself said: "My father is glorified in this, that you keep bearing much fruit and prove yourselves my disciples."

The main discourse, given by H. Fetzik, a full-time minister for 28 years, was entitled: "Are You Proving Yourself To Be a Fruitful Disciple?"

However, if said single station alarm device is directly connected to the electrical system of the building or if the single station alarm device is installed by any person hired or reimbursed in any manner for the installation, the necessary permits and approvals of Section 2 (a) shall be required.

Section 4. Severability. Should any section, clause or provision of this Ordinance be declared by the Court to be invalid, the same shall not affect the validity of the Ordinance as a whole or any part thereof other than the part so declared to be invalid.

Section 5. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective immediately upon publication in a newspaper of general circulation.

I, Leonard J. Folmar, Clerk for the City of Romulus, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of an Ordinance duly adopted by the Romulus City Council at its regular meeting held on the 11th day of December, 1979.

ago in which a Catholic priest in Massachusetts refused to baptize the baby of a woman who had stated publicly that she believed women should have the right to choose for themselves whether to have an abortion.

Now the Mormon Church has excommunicated a feminist who has taken a public stand in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) — which the church opposes.

It is not clear, however, whether she was expelled for advocating ERA or for some uncomplimentary statements about the Mormon Church.

Certainly one can sympathize with an employer for firing an employee who rents a hall to bad-mouth the company.

What makes excommunication from the Mormon Church more serious than getting fired, however, is that expulsion from the church means expulsion from heaven — or at least from the best location in the afterlife.

To the Mormons there are three places where we may spend our next million years or so after we leave these earthly precincts. They base this on something St. Paul said to the people of the young church in Corinth.

Wrote Paul: "The sun has a splendor of its own, the moon another splendor and the stars another. So it is with the resurrection from the dead." (I Corinthians 15:41, 42)

That is, we will go to one of three locations on resurrection day. These locations will be as different from each other as the sun is different from the moon and the stars in brightness.

To put it in down-to-earth terms, it will be like the difference between spending eternity in Cleveland on one hand and Hawaii on the other — with maybe Dallas in between.

The Mormons don't put it quite that way. What they say is that the "celestial" or highest post-resurrection kingdom is where family relationships will be preserved. This is the kingdom Mrs.

The lower kingdoms (still open to her) are made up of individuals minus their family ties.

For all its strictness in doctrine and discipline, the Mormon Church has more than 4 million members throughout the world.

In this country, however, membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (the official name of the church) is down slightly from 2.8 million in 1971 to 2.6 million today, although the trend is upward again.

There also is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with a total U.S. membership of 186,000 and a slightly different set of beliefs.

This group is popularly known as Mormon, too (Mormon was a prophet of the church), although the Reorganized Church prefers not to be called Mormon.

The two churches have a common origin. Both claim Joseph Smith as their founder. But there was a split after Smith's death in 1844.

Brigham Young took one faction west with him to Utah, now the Mormon Church's world headquarters.

Smith's wife Emma and his brother William sided with the group which stayed behind and which later became the Reorganized Church, with headquarters in Independence, Mo.

The Mormons often have been the center of controversy — among other things for their practice of polygamy (officially renounced in 1890) and for excluding blacks (a practice which ended in 1978).

They also have, on the other hand, been held in high esteem for their lifestyle, which stresses good health habits, family togetherness and personal morality. Now controversy is enveloping the church anew.

This week's 'Editor's Log' is a good example of the license some of our staff takes under the guise of editorial copy.

While it is certainly true that the Editorial Dept. is a very important part of this newspaper group, it is not the only part.

Equal time as it were, it is only fair that the rest of the hard working staff at Associated Newspapers gets the recognition they deserve.

Within each newspaper is a group of people who are designated the Composition Dept.

Their job is to put together the materials supplied from the Editorial and Advertising Departments to create a finished product which is delivered to your door each week.

If the truth were known, more than likely it is this department that contributes the most to our final product.

Supervisor Virginia Roullier regularly applies her talents to improving the page lay-out supplied by editorial personnel. Often being called upon to make 'a silk purse out of a sow's ear.'

Working with Virginia are the following people whose efforts are not recognized often enough: Jackie Lyles, Kathy Wade, Pam Haase, Debbie Hanson, Dolores Gosienski, Chery Bailey, Joyce Holmes, Candy Cox, Russ White, Mary Porter and Gail Jorgensen. Gail, by the way, is the person who is forced to work with the editor on the Editorial pages. Quite a cross to bear!

Supporting the efforts of Composition is our Camera Department. Ken Peterson, John Haase and Tim Ford handle the assignments.

The press room staff, those folks who print the finished product are supervised by Greg Morrison and Ken Lindemann. Pressmen Steve Michalski and Rick Jewell keep the machines running, while James Jablonicky, Andy Rowland, Ronald Londberg, Mike Partin, Albert Irving, Jonnie Strahan, Tim Nutt, Ernest Shaw, and Robert Minton assist.

Once the newspapers are printed it is up to those folk in the Circulation Department to get it delivered to our great bunch of carriers.

Dave Roe heads up that operation with Art Sandstedt, Gail Lewis, Geoff Kenny, Verna McMasters and Carol Chomos rounding out the staff.

Heading Retail Advertising is Fred Nesley, with Joan Hines running the Classified Ad Department. Working with them are the following people: Jeanette Hash, Judy Marshall, Judy Pelzman, Bob Johnston, Bert Osterberg, Pat Croo, Dan Klimkosky, Beth Jacobs, Harold Babbitt, Barbara Calandra, Steve Hatfield, Dwight Harbison, Theresa Fernegel, and Christine Sokol.

These are the people who provide our advertisers with the knowledge and know-how to get their message across to our readers.

Another group we could not do without is our 'keepers of the numbers,' the Accounting Department.

Headed by Cheryl Williams, who is assisted by Nina Willett, this duo keeps the wheels of progress well oiled.

And, of course, the cement holding the entire operation together is the Administrative Department.

Owner-Publisher, David J. Willett, is assisted by Donna Willett, Dorothy Jacobs, Mike Reddy and the Department Heads.

In addition to all of these people, we rely on a fine bunch of folk who insert our papers and deliver them to carriers' homes.

So you see, the Editorial Department is not the only part of this newspaper or any other.

The newspaper you receive each week reflects the efforts of many people who all bring a special talent to the job.

While we agree that Associated has a fine group of people in its editorial department, it also has a fine dedicated group in our other departments as well.

So sit back and read this week's newspaper. It is worth far more than $.25 you had to pay for it.

As we succeed in providing you with the information you need to be an informed citizen of your community, we have done what we have set out to do.

If, on the other hand, we do not provide you with that information, we would like to know about it.

After all, the people of Associated Newspapers are working for you.

Happy New Year!

Iran, a hard lesson

By CARL LEVIN
U.S. Senator

The heart-wrenching tragedy of the American hostage situation in Iran may turn out to be a very disguised opportunity.

The events in Iran, to some extent at least, characterize the volatile Middle East. And the Iranian assault on our nation should make us think long and hard about the wisdom of having this country's energy lifeline tied to Middle Eastern oil.

As Iran and the oil embargo of 1973 have shown, this nation has mortgaged its future — and the note is held by nations who are willing to foreclose if our policies conflict with their interests.

The Iranian students may have finally taught us a very hard lesson: we must become energy dependent.

We must either take action to control our own future, or we must surrender our destiny to the control of those who own the resources that have powered us in the past.

The country has delayed taking effective action for most of a decade. We have slipped and stalled, trying to retain our footing in a pool of quicksand. We have been unable to summon the national consensus and unity needed to forge a new path into future energy independence.

But the response to Iran created, for the first time in a generation, a sense of national outrage. If we can harness that outrage before it slips away, we can secure the promise of an independent future.

The opportunity coincides with the lifting of federal oil regulations, giving windfall profits to oil companies. While the companies can still take a large share of the profits to find more oil, the public needs a portion to fund our shift from imported oil to resources such as coal, solar and wind energy, hydropower, gasohol and synthetic fuels.

We also must invest in conservation.

Conservation is the cheapest way to cut energy consumption and cost, and the federal government offers tax credits for conservation efforts.

At least 15 percent of the first $2,000 spent on such energy-saving devices that go on furnaces, water heaters or chimneys can be credited against your federal income taxes.

Also up to $2,200 in tax credits is available for investment in renewable energy sources, such as sun and wind energy.

For more information, you should call the Energy Extension Service on its toll-free number, 1-800-292-4704.

Any home built before 1973, and many built since then, were designed to an era when energy costs were one-tenth of what they are today. A homeowner can cut energy use by at least half using the insulating techniques available on the market today. You should ask your utility company to do a free energy audit of your home.

I also suggest two manuals, "The Energy-Wise Home Buyer," for $2 and "In the Bank... or up the Chimney?" for $1.70. The manuals, which are published by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, are available through the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Another major thrust for America is synthetic fuels. But synthetic fuels will not heat our homes or fuel our cars any time soon. They are a hope of the future. Conservation is the best bet for today.

One of the most promising of the energy alternatives for Michigan is gasohol, a blend of one part alcohol and nine parts gasoline. It is a particularly good alternative for Michigan because plentiful Michigan corn, potatoes and other products can be used to make the alcohol in gasohol.

And while it costs more today, gasohol has the advantage of providing up to 5 percent better mileage than regular and no-lead gas.

The gasohol mixture should be a part of the mix of approaches we take to solve the energy problem. We must continue private oil exploration, development of other domestic natural resources and use of public incentives for energy conservation and alternative energy research and development.

Western civilization is said to be in decline. The truth of that claim will be tested as we try to deal with our energy crisis.

We cannot allow ourselves to be hostages to the oil producing nations of the world. Iran has highlighted the need.

Home Heating Assistance Program

By ROBERT LAW
State Representative
36th District

The Legislature has again set up a Home Heating Assistance Program designed to help senior citizens and lower income working families pay their home heating bills this winter. Legislation establishing the program for the third consecutive year was signed into law October 23, 1979. Under the bill, the program will be extended for at least two more years.

Is the program different from last year's program? Yes. Last year there was a restriction on how much liquid assets a person could own, but that restriction was eliminated by the Legislature this year.

Who administers the program? The state Department of Treasury, which administered the home heating relief program last year, is handling it again this winter.

Who is eligible? You are eligible to claim a home heating credit if you lived in Michigan at least six months of 1979. If you are single, you must have maintained your own household. Only one credit may be claimed for a household.

If you are a full-time student, you are not eligible if someone else claims you as a dependent.

I get public assistance; am I eligible? No. You do not qualify if you receive General Assistance or Aid to Families with Dependent Children (ADC).

I rent my household; can I claim a heating credit? Yes, if you qualify, you will receive a home heating credit regardless of whether you own your home or rent a home or apartment.

How much is the credit? The credit amount varies. In general, the lower your income and the more exemptions you have, the bigger the credit. Last year the average heating credit per household was slightly under $90, which is about what it is expected to be again this winter.

Your Exemptions	Standard Allowance	Income Ceiling
1	$200	$ 5,714
2	240	6,857
3	280	8,000
4	310	8,857
5	340	9,714
6 or more	370	10,571

For purposes of figuring the credit, the state established a so-called standard allowance for each household depending on the number of exemptions in the household. Beside your number of exemptions in the second column is your standard allowance. Your credit is your standard allowance less 3.5 percent of your household income. You will not get a credit if your household income exceeds the amount in the column on the right.

Sample Computation

John and Mary Jones had household income in 1979 of $6,200. They are both 65 years old, which entitles them to four (4) exemptions.

Standard Allowance	$310
Less: 3.5 percent of household income (.035 x $6,200)	217
Home heating credit	93

How do I get my credit? You claim your home heating credit on the same form used to claim a Homestead Property Tax Credit. Step-by-step instructions for filing a claim are found in the booklets these forms come in. Be sure to read the instructions carefully. If you are entitled to an Income Tax refund or Homestead Property Tax Credit, your home heating credit will be added to that refund check.

Where do I get the form I need? The Michigan Department of Treasury will send the forms to you if you are a senior citizen, veteran or qualified handicapped person who filed a 1978 Homestead Property Tax Credit claim. If you do not get the forms in the mail but you think you may qualify for the home heating credit, you can pick up forms at your bank or post office, or at any Michigan Department of Treasury office.

When do I have to file my claim? You should file as soon as you know the exact amount of your 1979 household income. The sooner you file, the quicker your claim will be processed.

Where can I get help if I have more questions? The instruction booklets for the Michigan Income Tax and Homestead Property Tax Credit list all Michigan Department of Treasury offices in the state. Free help is available from all of these offices.

If you need help free assistance and additional forms are available at all Michigan Department of Treasury offices.

Editor's log

Where credit is due!

By DENNIS FASSETT
ANP Managing Editor

With the holidays, and the beginning of the new year now behind us, it is again time to give credit to the people who have made this past year much easier.

My fine staff.

I believe no other organization has a better or more dedicated group of people devoting their lives to bringing you your local news.

Sue McDonald, squeeze of the grape and deadline as well, has covered for her boss, making the sow's ear a silk purse once again.

Sports Editor Tom Mooradian has again provided his readers with his considerable insights into the sports scene of Western Wayne County. Tom's loyal following speaks well for his abilities.

While Chief Photographer Lothar Koneitzko has still yet to return to the job following his tragic automobile accident of nearly two years ago, he does stop by on a regular basis and provide us with his wisdom.

The man who assumed the nearly impossible job of filling in for Lothar during his absence, Tom Greenwood, staff photographer, has continued to improve his photographic technique and has now promised to give Lothar instruction upon his return.

Maureen Camps, staff writer assigned to the Westland and Inkster beats, has continued to author the stories that have captured the attention of the many readers of those communities.

Jim (Chas) Bradley, former clergyman and conscience of the newsroom, is currently assigned to the Canton Township beat, but his byline often appears through-out these publications.

Carrie Young, newest member of the editorial staff, again captured state-wide recognition for her ability to ferret out the difficult story. Winner of the Michigan Press Association's first place honors for her investigative reporting on the plight of area seniors, Carrie has impressed everyone with her drive, ambition, and dedication to her chosen profession.

Lee Smith, the elegant lady from Belleville and Tecumseh, produces society material for our papers and always looks like she just walked out of the pages of Harper's Bazaar Magazine.

Kay DeBord, longtime member of this staff, has again provided her readers with the latest happenings on the society scene. Kay has done much to help restore the local flavor to these papers.

Diane Ferguson, 'general manager' of our Belleville office, is typical of the kind of people we are proud to call our own. Diane has been involved in her town for many years and has represented well, these papers in the area.

Bob Ameen, staff writer assigned to the Belleville-Romulus areas, has once again brought his unique talent to bear on his area.

These are the people who have worked the past year to help produce what we believe to be the best local newspapers around.

Throughout the year, I have been the beneficiary of their combined efforts.

While they never complain when readers overlook their contributions, I am, and remain fully aware of what they have done. They are the very backbone of these papers, and without them, we could not have managed to bring you the news and events of the past year.

Thank you staff.

Happy New Year everyone.

Ask Carol Premo

By CAROL PREMIO, C.S.W.

Carol Premo, a Certified Social Worker in private practice in Belleville, Mich., will be presenting weekly answers to problems which may have been the source of either joy or pain for some of our readers.

You are invited to ask Carol about a problem or discuss a solution by mailing your letter to: Carol Premo, Associated Newspapers, 47818 W. Huron River Drive, Belleville, Mich. 48111.

Dear Carol,
I saw something at the supermarket the other day that made my blood boil. Some fool opened a jar of peanuts, ate some and put them back on the shelf. I couldn't believe it! How can anybody be so rotten. The poor soul who buys the jar will be mad and the market is out some money. Then to top this all off — the costs are passed on to me, the shopper. I was so surprised I just stood and stared. I think I should have said something to that person or the store manager. What should I have done?

Shopper

Dear Shopper,
You are absolutely correct that everyone will be out some money. What you describe is blatant stealing and should be immediately reported to the management. Everyone ends up losing through theft and dishonesty and everyone should help in controlling it whenever possible. P.S. Did you think of the possible contamination. Ugh!

Dear Carol,
When a bunch of people I know get together, we play cards. One person is unreal — he acts real greedy — pouts if he is losing and grabby when he is winning. If his cards are bad he makes a fuss about the size of the raises and wants a ceiling put on them, when his cards are running good, he forgets the ceiling and bids as he wishes. We usually play dealer chooses the game, so one night there was a game he was losing at, baseball I think and he said if it were chosen again he would stop playing. So, the next dealer named baseball and he quit playing. At the end, we played showdown and high card and he was irritated that he was not asked back from the other room to play. I frankly find him a great pain to play cards with. How should I handle this?

Not the Host

Dear Not,
You answered many questions for me when you signed your letter "Not the Host." I couldn't help wondering why you continued to invite such a bore. Aren't there rules and regulations in poker. Perhaps you could discuss antes, limits, games, etc. before you begin to play. Even if you are not the host it would seem that you might be able to have some input into the evening's activities. Probably the others would welcome your suggestions and the relief from his grouching.

Dear Carol,
I have two sons that are a joy and problem combined — Son No. 1 — very easy to direct, Son No. 2 — very difficult to control. Both are well liked in the community, both very well liked at their companies. Son No. 2 is selfwilled and wants complete control over his actions. (Drinking on duty). Car accidents involved. How do you relate to young men about the serious trouble they are facing.

Throw a Fit

Dear Throw,
Probably not. You don't give me any indication as to your sons' ages but if they are working and drinking I will assume they are not small boys. (at least not chronologically). When children grow up and reach the age of consent, parents do not always have the kind of influence over them that they may like to have. Screaming, crying or throwing a fit would probably only serve to further alienate your sons. Try to be consistent, non condemning or accepting of negative behavior and available. If he sees you as a steady, reliable force in his life he may turn to you and then the way will be open for you to help him. He sounds as if he might benefit from counseling and perhaps you will be able to suggest it when the time is right. Be patient and good luck.

An old tune... but...

By EDWIN FUELNER

Discussing this story with a political acquaintance the other evening, I was surprised by the matter-of-fact "so what" reaction I got.

"Why that's not news," he said. "It happens all the time." I thought about that for several days. And have decided that the fact that this sort of thing happens all the time here in Washington is precisely what makes it worth telling you about.

This story starts eleven years ago when American Cyanamid chemical company asked the Food and Drug Administration for permission to market a new "systematic" medication for control fleas in dogs. With 50 million pet dogs in the country, there would appear to be considerable market for the product. Known as "Proban," the medicine is administered as drops in the animal's food or drink. Fleas bite the dog — fleas bite the dust. I am told.

After considerable testing, the product (generically known as "cythioate") proved 99 percent effective, according to information submitted to the Food and Drug Administration. Cyanamid also claimed other advantages over conventional shampoos, powders, and flea collars — but that's not really important to this story.

In June 1968, FDA approved marketing of the product, for use only as a veterinary prescription medicine, however.

Subsequently, Cyanamid performed additional research and, in 1972, submitted data to the FDA which, the company claimed, showed that cythioate drops could be used safely as an over-the-counter remedy available at the local pet store (like various worming agents and other products).

After two years of foot dragging, FDA decided in October 1974 that the Cyanamid petition was "incomplete." The company was astounded, after having painstakingly prepared the necessary data.

The next step was to ask for a formal hearing to resolve the "impasse." This request was made in early 1975. Another year and a half passed, and still no word from the regulators. So in October 1976 Cyanamid notified the FDA that it would ask the courts for a writ of mandamus, which would require FDA to respond to the already 20-months-old request.

It took only a month for the FDA to get the message, and in November 1976 FDA published a notice of "opportunity" for hearing — giving the company 30 days to present a formal request for hearing and additional materials supporting its request for over-the-counter approval. The company complied, of course.

Nearly a full year later, in September 1977, FDA denied the hearing, prompting the company to file an appeal in the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia.

We are now nearly ten years into the saga, remember, and getting this far already has cost the company plenty. The cost, of course, will be reflected in higher prices.

This brings us early up-to-date. The court handed down its ruling towards the end of this summer, ordering — as any reasonable person would expect — FDA to hold the hearings.

"... The papers on file in this matter generate several material issues of fact and science that FDA attempted to resolve without a hearing," in violation of Section 512 (c) of the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act, the court ruled.

So here we are, 11 years later, the company finally granted a ("fair"?) hearing under court order, and little if anything resolved — except, perhaps, that the FDA has thumbed its nose at the law, shown that it is irresponsible, and done its little bit to boost consumer prices.

Yes, my friend, similar stories can be found all over this town. Which is exactly the point of this column.

Chamber Chatter

DOE wastes taxpayers' funds

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President, Chamber of Commerce of the United States

The Department of Energy is charged with illegally using taxpayers' funds to pay for consumer groups who testify against business in agency proceedings.

The Environmental Protection Agency is challenged after issuing regulations on solid waste which may force firms nationwide to immediately close their waste facilities without any prior notice or hearing.

The State Attorney General in Oklahoma is accused of illegally forbidding non-American corporations from owning land in his state—a decision that could significantly jeopardize foreign investment, jobs and economic growth in other states.

What's going on here? On the surface, you might answer, "Nothing much, because nothing changes." True, big government's juggernaut rolls on, gradually eliminating the remaining freedoms and opportunities in the private economy. And true, there seems to be no limit to its increases in spending, taxes and regulations.

Still, something fundamental really is changing—a subtle shift in momentum has begun. As more and more Americans become angry enough to fight back, big government is finally being thrown on the defensive. Victory is not yet in sight, but the potential to achieve it is.

Consider: Thanks to growing pressure from the grass roots, it is now the initiatives to reduce spending and taxes that are proliferating in Congress. The spenders can still prevail, but they are weary and embarrassed at constantly having to explain why they refuse to give taxpayers a break.

The activities of the regulatory agencies are also being more closely scrutinized, even reined-in. One of the most important weapons in this entire counteroffensive is that of litigation; and as evidenced by the legal challenges listed earlier, the cutting edge of the litigation effort is developing right here in the U.S. Chamber.

The National Chamber Litigation Center, Inc. was established in February 1977, to represent the business community before the courts and regulatory agencies. Rather than simply roll over and play dead every time a government bureaucrat or no-growth group threatens lengthy, expensive legal action, NCLC provides the possibility for any business, no matter how small, to fight back and win.

Among its goals, the Center has pledged to challenge unconstitutional and irresponsible laws and regulations that harm the business community and our national economy; to counter restrictive antibusiness forces affecting labor relations, business' constitutional rights and federal rule-making activities, and to act as a rational legal advocate for business on major public policy issues—environmental matters, consumer affairs and trade negotiations.

Obviously, the Center's resources are not unlimited, so its participation in a case is normally based on certain major criteria:

—The case must involve an issue of direct importance to a broad cross-section of the business community.

—The case should have substantial regional or national significance.

—No other party is presenting the broad business perspective before the court or agency.

—The business community has a need for the expertise and assistance NCLC can provide.

—The issue fits within NCLC's overall priorities and resources.

That said, the Center has already established an impressive record—14 victories in the past two years.

For too long, extremists within regulatory agencies and certain self-designated consumer and environmental groups have used, and abused, the courts to by-pass Congress and create public policy. The mountains of resulting regulations, requiring inordinate amounts of time, money and paperwork, have drastically curtailed business operations at home and harmed our ability to compete abroad.

In seeking a more balanced approach to the establishment of national priorities, the National Chamber Litigation Center is making an important contribution to those who believe in individual opportunity and economic growth for all Americans. For that reason, I believe the Center is worthy of support.

Feds scoff at request

federal guidelines and rules that surpass any volunteer organization, as well as sophisticated programs which only result from years of operating those programs.

The Jaycees, said Norman, are without a certified accounting system, a merit system for employment and without an outreach to the poor program, rendering that group ineligible for funds.

"They can request all they want, but they ain't getting nothing," Norman said. "We have experience. We have 10 pages of guidelines. We understand the complex problems. They don't. Experience does not mean weekend cleanups or selling candy for crippled kids."

Norman admitted, however, that in his two years at the BCS the community action agencies he monitors are not always capable of meeting the guidelines and rules, nor have they proven able to bring direct services to the poor as intended.

Hesaid ANP's 4-part investigation into the fiscal and program activities of CUFA was "right on target", when it learned and reported on misuse of CUFA money, faltering programs and alleged falsified recordings of low-income residents reportedly having been serviced by CUFA.

"But, you see, the system is behind us...not them (the Jaycees)," Norman said.

The system apparently wasn't behind the Wayne Jaycees this year when that group came to the aid of a Wayne resident who was facing the threat of a gas shut-off.

In fact, the system had failed that senior and ignored the Jaycees.

"This senior needed help from CUFA, but for a year was refused help. Then it was almost too late. We stepped in and helped her," said Caincross.

Caincross said a Wayne senior was discovered heating her home with two portable heaters. She was without gas.

The Jaycees intervened and paid more than $110 for 125 gallons of the fuel, helping her to make it through the winter season without total reliance on the portable heaters.

That local chapter also responded to the needs of seniors without transportation, food, in need of their homes to be insulated against severe weather conditions, and with a yearly budget of about $24,000 raised through Jaycee efforts, they are able to accomplish a part of their goals.

But we'd like to do more. We're doing for people, but we're getting shafted because we have to pay ourselves for everything we want to do," Caincross said.

"You'd think somewhere along the line we'd get help."

Joyner believes the Jaycees are accomplishing tasks with little or no funding that the bureaucrats have proven incapable of doing, even with the necessary funding.

"The bureaucrats, though, think they own the world. The bottomline is the Jaycees right now are doing what the bureaucrats can't do, but the bureaucrats know a good thing and don't want to funnel the money anywhere but to themselves," Joyner said. "It's a losing battle."

If Schreiber and his fellow volunteers had their way, however, they'd be given the chance to demonstrate their capabilities.

"The Jaycees motto is, 'If the Jaycees are given the chance, they can move mountains'."

fiscal year would see Romulus come out short to the tune of $1 million or more.

Adding to his statement Thursday in turning down salary boosts for the city's three elected officials, Folmar defended council members who supported the pay board's recommendation.

"Those council members voting against the denial did so because they felt a fair and equitable wage for elected city officials is in the best interests of the community."

In like measure, the clerk also defended the vote of the three council members who voted for the salary denial.

"We (mayor, clerk and treasurer) are sensitive to those who voted for the salary increase denial. It was one of the factors we considered in deferring the salary raises now."

Thursday Raspberry said the mayor was getting the 6 percent salary boost not long after he had turned down a 7 percent salary raise for the city's three foremen in contract talks now going on. He said the matter now was in mediation.

"The 6 percent salary raises were not budgeted in the city budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year," Raspberry contended.

He explained that prior to the start of this fiscal year—July 1, 1979—the mayor had appointed a committee to make salary recommendations for city department heads and non-union personnel. The committee was made up of Oakley, council member McAnally, council member Mary Carter and council member Gerry Canejo.

Raspberry said the mayor and other committee members recommended a 7 percent salary boost for city employees making under $15,000 annually and a 5 percent salary jump for those making more than $15,000 yearly.

"Yet, the mayor was going to accept a 6 percent salary increase for himself after he had announced a cutback on city expenditures due to the current cash crisis," Raspberry said.

Raspberry cited a statement made Wednesday night by the treasurer which revealed that a third of the city's accounts now show "a zero balance."

ANP publisher to attend White House conference

Sandwiched between the big business and government, the small businesses across the country are slowly being squeezed out of existence.

And to identify the problems and hopefully find solutions for them, the White House will convene a Conference on Small Business which will be held in Washington, Jan. 13-17.

David J. Willett, Publisher of The Associated Newspapers which includes Belleville Enterprise, Romulus Roman, The Canton Eagle, Inkster Ledger-Star, The Westland Eagle and The Wayne Eagle, will be one of 2,100 delegates who will attend the conference.

The delegates will spend four days deliberating issues in several areas, including: Capital Formation and Retention, Government Regulation and Paperwork, Women in Business, Minority Business Development, International Trade, Inflation, Economic Policy, and Government Programs, Federal Procurement, Veterans in Business, Energy, Innovation and Technology, Entrepreneurial Education and Management Assistance.

Obviously from the above agenda, the delegates will be busy. But in addition to their busy schedule, they will also hear a number of distinguished speakers addressing the subject of the climate for the small business in America.

President Carter is scheduled to deliver the opening address on Sunday, Jan. 13. Subsequent speakers will include William Miller, secretary of treasury; Alfred Kahn, assistant to the President on inflation; and Luther Hodges Jr., acting secretary of commerce.

The final day of the conference, delegates will vote on resolutions proposed by various theme areas. Their final recommendations will include proposals that may be enacted in three separate ways: Executive Orders issued by the President, legislation passed by Congress, and initiatives taken by the private sector.

Of the 2,100 delegates eligible to attend the 1980 conference, a clear majority were democratically elected at 57 field meetings held in all parts of the country to gather information and ideas from the broad cross-section of the U.S. small business community.

In addition, each state Governor, U.S. Senator and member of the U.S. House of Representatives were allowed to appoint one delegate. A limited number of delegates—approximately 200—were appointed by the Executive Branch.

The conference has been convened at a time when the small business of the total number of non-farm businesses, 10.4 million (96.4 percent) are considered "small" by the Small Business Administration's small business size standards. Small business accounted for 43 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP) and provides 58 percent of the U.S. business employment (excluding farms).

Small business directly or indirectly provides the livelihood of over 100 million Americans, creates more jobs than any other sector of the economy and is responsible for more than 50 percent of all innovation.

lobby is looked to as a "powerful new wave that's hitting official Washington," according to the Wall Street Journal.

Christmas program termed 'successful'

A standing room only audience of parents and school personnel was treated to what Principal Harold Connon called "a successful Christmas program" recently at Mt. Pleasant Elementary School in Romulus.

Dick Kruse, junior high band director and head of elementary and secondary music, told the audience the program was one of the "best prepared" in his 14 years of experience.

Kruse commended Mrs. Stacia Schalti, elementary instrumental music teacher, and parents of participating pupils for a job well done.

Schalti directed a band, which opened Monday night's program, made up of students from Hayti, Merriman and Mt. Pleasant elementary schools.

Next on the program was the singing of Christmas carols by the kindergarten class of Mrs. Debra Street Choral readings were delivered by the first grade class of Mrs. Rose Foster and the second and third grade classes of Mrs. Barbara Jaszcz.

A wrap-up of information on Christmas around the world was presented next by the lower grade emotionally impaired class of Ms. Terri Kamensky and the third grade class of Ms. Wendy Serecombe.

The famous holiday poem, "Twas the Night Before Christmas", was delivered by Tom Britt, fourth grader in Mrs. Bettie McDonald's class.

Students in Mrs. McDonald's fourth and fifth grade class and those from Mrs. Algertha Leonard's fourth grade class presented their rendition of "The Twelve Days Before Christmas".

Concluding the evening program was a play, "Mother Goose's Christmas Surprise", performed by students from the upper emotionally impaired class of Ms. Caryn Green, split fifth and sixth grade class of James Madigan, and the sixth grade class of Mrs. Charlotte Price.

Council changes rules

The recent explosion and fire at a gasoline storage tank farm in Taylor has made the City Council in neighboring Romulus sit up and take notice.

Last Wednesday night, a motion by Councilman Ed Rush for more stringent safety requirements for gasoline storage facilities in the city was approved by the City Council.

The motion directed the city attorney to contact the state fire marshal, the city of Taylor, and the Romulus fire chief to gather information needed to draft a new city ordinance to put more strict safety measures on local gasoline storage tanks.

Rush called attention to the many gasoline storage facilities on Goddard and Wick roads in Romulus

Undelivered refunds seek their 'owners'

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) wants you... Glenda Barksdale of Inkster, Stanley Borden of Canton Township and a list of other area residents who stand to benefit by answering the call.

According to IRS officials, there are a good number of undelivered federal tax refund checks of Michigan taxpayers, many in the Western Wayne County area, that are waiting to be claimed.

Many of these checks, according to the IRS, remain undelivered because taxpayers have moved and left no forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service.

Taxpayers who have not changed addresses, but still have not received their tax refunds should check with IRS as soon as possible, officials said, because refund delays can also be caused by lost or stolen checks. In these cases, the IRS can put tracers on the missing checks.

Some refunds may be delayed because of errors, or omissions, on tax returns. Affected taxpayers in these instances should follow the instructions received from the IRS in order to speed up issuance of their checks.

The IRS stressed that in all refund inquiries, the taxpayer should provide name and address as they appear on the return, the actual name and address if different, the Social Security numbers, and the type of form filed.

Below is a list of individuals entitled to a tax refund for 1978 and or a prior year. Persons named on the list are urged to contact the IRS at 226-7288.

Breaking the ice

Lakes spawn communities of winter fishermen

When winter's blast of freezing temperatures seals over Michigan's inland waters, thousands of hardy souls venture from their cozy confines to "break the ice" for another go-around at cold-weather fishing.

Almost overnight, hundreds of little communities spring up on lakes and bays, populated by a breed of rugged sportsmen and women.

Bone-chilling as the weather may be, these small settlements are hot spots for action as their residents spud holes in the ice, jiggle an ice fly for panfish, set tip-ups for walleye, pike or lake trout, or toss a spear at a northern or muskie.

All this, plus the camaraderie of the folks "next door", keeps calling fishermen back to their shanty towns until the spring thaw sets in.

There are three basic ways to go about ice fishing—with hand lines, tip-ups, or spears. The first two are by far the most popular, probably because they are the simplest and can be used for taking just about every kind of fish on Michigan's legal catch list during the winter.

Spear fishing is a more specialized sport, which puts a premium on patience and accuracy. Generally, three types of fishing are best: from around dawn until mid-morning and again from late afternoon to sundown. However, spearing action usually holds up throughout the day. Early, late, or in between, get out whenever you have the chance.

Another general thing to keep in mind is that fish become rather sluggish during the winter, and move around less than in the summer. So it stands to reason that the more holes you cut and try, the better your chances for locating fish.

In getting geared up, you'll want a fiber-glass rod 3 to 5 feet long. A limber rod usually is preferred for catching panfish and trout and a stiff rod, which aids a firmer setting of the hook, for pike, walleye and muskie.

If you're going after large trout or other big fish, a good free running reel, instead of the usual line-winding cleat, is a must. It will allow you to "play" your fish better. Also, when used without a bobber, this reel will let you change your fishing depth with the twist of a finger.

Some fishermen substitute for the bobber by curling part of the line around their finger to get the "message" when they have a bite.

Fishermen who don't care for reels keep their excess line from freezing and out of the way by winding it around two L-screws which are placed about 12 inches apart on the wooden handles of their rods.

Choice in the strength of lines also varies, with not over 4-pound test recommended for best action on bluegills, other panfish, brown and rainbow trout. Some sportsmen who are angling specifically for pike or muskies, have lines that go as high as 8-12 pound test. Neglecting to use light lines probably is the most frequent mistake of unsuccessful fishermen. Occasionally, fish will break the lighter line, but with some finesse, you can land most fish and are certain to have more bites. One thing ice fishermen are unanimous about is that the line should be transparent monofilament.

When it comes to the bobber, the smaller the better, as long as it's big enough to stay afloat. Fish generally don't bite as eagerly in the winter as during the summer. Thus, the float buoyancy and lure weight should be balanced so the slightest nibble will sink the bobber and offer minimum resistance to the fish. If the float is too buoyant, fish often spit out the bait.

Assuming for the moment that you've picked the right baits and hooks, the strategy in hand line fishing is pretty simple. You just "bob" or "jig" your line with a short up-and-down motion to attract fish to your bait. Stop every couple of minutes. This will enable you to feel a bite, and give fish a better crack at your offerings.

Tip-ups, equipped with reels and flags, are used mostly for larger fish; northern pike, walleyes, muskies, and lake trout. They are cheap to buy or easy to make. Most of those on the market are made to fold up for compact handling. There's no big trick to operating tip-ups; they are merely baited and set out. When a fish bites, the flag flies up and the fun begins. The rest is up to the fishermen, and he goes to it by giving his line a solid jerk, setting the hook in the fish.

Next, he pulls the line in rapidly, hand over hand. When he has the fish near the hole, it's time to play it careful. In their haste, anglers most frequently lose their catches at this point by trying to get the fish on the ice before it is ready. Be prepared on the violent surges to let the line slip through your fingers—but always with some tension.

As you may have guessed, tip-ups

are especially nice to have in colder weather when it's hard to stand guard over fishing holes for a long period of time. Once they are set out, the fisherman can retire to a warm shanty and wait for the action to pop. Or, for those who like variety in their sport, tip-ups give them a chance to also try their luck at hand line fishing.

An absolute "must" when spearing is a good dark shanty which eliminates the chance of fish seeing you and being spooked. If you have a stove, make sure that the glow from it is blocked. The shanty itself should be sturdily built so the sound from your movements inside will not travel through the ice.

As for the fisherman, he should wear dark clothes and gloves so he won't tip himself off to his underwater targets.

For accuracy's sake, use a spear that is weighted. Those that aren't have to be thrown too hard and this tends to make them angle off course. Overall weight of the spear depends upon the fisherman's tastes and the kind of fish he's going after. The spear used on whopping-sized sturgeon may weigh as much as 15-18 pounds.

Whatever the weight, the spear you'll want will have seven to nine strong tines and about a 7-foot handle with a rope attached so you won't lose it. In attaching the rope, here's a little trick which sometimes may be the difference between landing a fish and losing it. Run your rope through a cotterpin on the spear's handle down to the tines where it is tied fast or secured with a metal ring.

When you hit the mark and start to haul the fish in, a slight jerk pulls the cotterpin out and lets you lift the spear with the tines up. If the fish is not speared very well, this helps to keep it on the tines instead of giving it a chance to work free.

Getting back to the preliminaries, the element of surprise can't be overstressed as a key to successful spear fishing. So, in getting poised for action, lower your spear into the water before you release it.

Otherwise, it will make a loud plunging sound when it hits the water, and alert the fish in time to let it dart away to safety.

Naturally, before you can test any of the things we've been talking about, there is the small matter of making a hole in the ice. Many veteran fishermen say the Swedish type auger can't be beat for this, especially when the ice is 12 inches thick or more. Others swear by their trusty spuds, and some favor axes. It's your choice. Of course, the auger isn't designed for the type of hole that spear fishermen need.

Whatever tool you pick, keep it sharp or by the time the hole is made, you may be too tuckered to enjoy your fishing.

Safe ice fishing begins by sizing up conditions on your lake before carting shanties and other paraphernalia onto the ice. A good place to start checking lakes is right around the shore. If shoreline ice is squishy or broken up, it's a pretty good bet that the lake is still not safe.

Caught you

When winter's blast of freezing temperatures seals over the state's inland waters, thousands of hardy souls will venture from their snug and cozy homes to "break the ice" for another bout of cold-weather fishing. For some it can be a chilling experience, for others the nibble of a nosy bluegill or the quick tug that indicates it's a lake trout makes it all the more exciting and warming to the soul.

'Be Trim' handles yo-yo syndrome of weight loss

Dealing with the "yo-yo syndrome" and "pigging out" are among the goals of "Be Trim," a new eating management program now available to the public through the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital Education Center.

"Our program tries to ease participants into life-style changes that will lead to gradual, permanent weight loss," explained Bobbie Schwartz, developer of "Be Trim."

She said elements of "Be Trim" grew from six years of teaching other weight-control programs in Washtenaw County.

"We de-emphasize dieting because it is an 'off and on' approach that usually results in weight being off and on—the yo-yo syndrome,"

she noted.

Altering attitudes towards eating also is a major thrust.

"The tendency to think of foods in moral terms, as 'good' and 'bad,' promotes guilty feelings at overeating, and excessive guilt can trigger a series of overeating binges," she said. "We try to eliminate guilt and encourage the idea that all foods are permissible, one must simply learn to control the quantity. When this idea is absorbed, it becomes far more likely that overeating binges, or 'pig outs,' will be isolated events."

Ms. Schwartz noted that "Be Trim" previously has been available only to employees of the Catherine McAuley Health Center (CMHC), which includes St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Mercywood Neuro-Psychiatric Hospital, and the Maple Medical Center.

"Most of our employee participants have lost about a pound per week, which is exactly the loss rate that most doctors recommend," she reported.

"Be Trim," which is seeking 150 participants from the general public, is part of CMHC's effort to expand the health awareness and promotion programs of its units.

In addition to Ms. Schwartz, program coordinators for "Be Trim" include Anne Quigley, patient education coordinator, Lois Sczomak, clinical dietitian, both of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

One of several free informational meetings on Jan. 8, 9, and 10 at the Education Center of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital must be attended to enroll in the 10 week, $50 "Be Trim" program.

To register for one of the free meetings, call 572-3023 from 8 to 11 a.m. and 572-3112 from 4 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 769-4967 from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

What's for lunch?

After a 2-week holiday vacation, students will be returning to school next week, and cafeterias will be ready, serving up such entrees as Italian lasagna, oven-fried clams and baked chicken cannaloni.

In the family-style luncheon programs at Quirk, Savage, West Willow, Elwell and Tyler Elementary schools the menu Monday will be hot dogs on buns, baked beans, tossed salads with French dressing, pineapple or peaches, chilly things and milk, followed by a lineup of cold meat and cheese submarine sandwiches, juice, fruit gelatin, cookies and milk on Tuesday.

Next Wednesdays youngsters will be dining on lasagna, cauliflower, chopped broccoli, hot garlic bread, fruit gelatin, pudding and milk, while slated for next Thursday will be a menu of pizza, buttered whole carrots, tossed salads with Italian dressing, fruit cocktail, cake and milk.

Rounding out the week will be a menu of oven fried clams or shrimp, tator tots, cole slaw, celery and carrot sticks, pineapple juice, lemon drink, pudding and milk.

In the remaining elementary schools the menu Monday will be juice, cheeseburgers on buns, tator rounds, chilly things and milk.

Tuesday the cafeterias will be serving soup, sloppy joes on buns, oven french fries, cookies and milk, while on tap for next Wednesday will be lasagna, brussel sprouts or broccoli, hot garlic bread and butter, fruit gelatin and milk.

Next Thursday's menu will include juice, pizza, vegetable, salad or cole slaw, fruit gelatin, pudding and milk, while topping off the week will be a menu of soup and crackers, fish on buns with tartar sauce, tator rounds, gelatin and milk.

In the junior and senior schools the menu Monday will be hamburgers on buns or Coney Island foot-longs, soup and crackers, french fries, pears and milk, while slated for Tuesday is a menu of pizza or bologna and American cheese club sandwiches, juice, french fries, fruit gelatin, pears, butterscotch pudding and milk.

Next Wednesday the menu will include spaghetti with meat sauce or chopped steak submarine sandwiches, soup and crackers, fruit gelatin, tator rounds, tossed salads with dressing and milk.

Next Thursday students will be dining on hot dogs or baked chicken cannaloni with tomato sauce, juice, corn, french fries, peaches, cookies and milk, while next Friday the cafeterias will be serving fish on buns or shrimp on buns, juice, green beans, french fries, cole slaw and milk.

Bird count is Saturday

The fourth annual "Kensington Park's New Year's Bird Count" will be held at the nature center of Kensington Metropark on Jan. 5, starting at 8 a.m.

The purpose of the Bird Count, an annual event, is to census the birds of Kensington Metropark.

Naturalists advise participants to meet at the nature center, bring binoculars, and a lunch (if you plan to stay beyond noon) and dress for the weather.

Advance registration is required. For registration or information, contact the nature center at Kensington Metropark at 685-1561 (Milford).

SEMTA, D-DOT merge

A comprehensive regional transportation system and a merger with the Detroit-Department of Transportation have both been approved by the board of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA).

The issue of merger had been one of the major stumbling blocks to the final selection of a regional system. Details of the merger were ironed out between the SEMTA board and Detroit Mayor Coleman A. Young only a few days before the Dec. 18 deadline the board had set for itself as the date to select a regional transit plan.

The plan, adopted by an 11-vote majority of the 15-member SEMTA Board, includes an approximately 12.8-mile light rail line which would operate from downtown Detroit to 10 Mile Road — some 8.2 miles of the system, reaching from downtown Detroit to Six Mile Road, would be subsurface. The plan also includes an additional 315 regular buses to be used in local and express service; more than 300 additional small buses to be used for general public dial-a-ride and for special elderly and handicapped service; expanded commuter rail service on the existing Pontiac to Detroit line, all-day service between Ann Arbor and Detroit and new peak-hour service between Mt. Clemens and Detroit; and an approximately 3-mile people mover system in the Detroit central business district.

The plan chosen by the board was a variation of one of seven improvement plans under consideration. The board chose the plan labeled "X-1"; however, they extended the light rail line in the original X-1 plan by approximately 2 miles.

The cost of the original X-1 (including all service expansion) was $1.44 billion. The extension is expected to add approximately $75 million to that total.

A resolution to merge SEMTA and the Detroit-Department of Transportation was adopted unanimously. The resolution reads in part that "SEMTA and the City of Detroit (will) merge into a single region-wide public transportation system, governed by a policy board that would protect the interests of all parties and operating under the

The resolution also assures that the city shall get fair value for its system, and the employees will be assured of protection for their jobs, wages, benefits and working conditions. The resolution also assures that the service in the City of Detroit shall be restored to a minimum of that provided in 1976, before city service reductions.

The resolution specifies that the merger issue be submitted to the people of Detroit for a vote in or before 1982. However, according to SEMTA General Manager Larry E. Salci: "The referendum is, of course, important, but at this point we do not foresee any major opposition on the part of Detroit citizens to a merger. The citizens of Detroit, like other citizens of this region, have expressed an overwhelming desire for improved transit services, and that can best be accomplished by one coordinated system.

SEMTA currently maintains a purchase of service agreement with D-DOT which has provided the necessary funding for the City to continue its operations.

Also, in or before 1982, a taxation proposal to fund operating deficits of the regional system will be presented to the voters of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Although SEMTA covers a 7-county area, the services are concentrated in these three counties. Details of the taxation proposal have yet to be worked out.

The next step in the development of the selected regional plan is submittal of that plan to the Michigan State Legislature for approval of the 20 percent local share for preliminary engineering. Once the local share is assured, the plan will then be submitted to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for approval of the 80 percent federal share for preliminary engineering.

Commissioners reject hiring of a county manager

The proposed hiring of a management specialist conceived to temporarily administer Wayne County government has been turned down by the County Board of Commissioners.

By a vote of 13-11, the commissioners rejected the idea of Commissioner Arthur M. Carter during their meeting Dec. 20. The defeat was despite approval 14-6 a week before by the Ways and Means Committee, consisting of all 27 members of the board.

Testimony against the measure was led by Commissioners James J. Rashid of Dearborn, Kay L. Beard of Inkster and Alex Pilch, also of Dearborn.

Rashid called the proposal "a waste of time" and a potential "waste of somebody else's money." Noting that the proposal calls for funding from an independent, outside source, Rashid said: "I'm not opposed if someone wants to give us money, but if somebody does, let's use it for something else, something worthwhile."

He said the proposed consultant could not possibly conduct an independent audit, could not recommend more effective cost reduction that the board already has, and would be unable to maintain a daily account of expenses, and all ideas expressed in the Carter proposal.

In addition, Rashid said the proposal would duplicate or conflict with the reason for formation of the County Efficiency Task Force. The task force is a prestigious 25-member group of private citizens representing business, labor, education, government and various civic organizations throughout the county.

Commissioner Beard also argued in favor of waiting for the task force report, saying that appointment consulting authority beforehand would insult a "distinguished panel."

Pilch said the proposal was vague

in reference to funding from outside sources.

"All the ideas supposed in the proposal are our responsibility. Let's exercise it."

During Egyptian tour

Delegation gets to know Middle East

Eighty metropolitan area citizens, comprising a special delegation fostered by Wayne County Community College, has embarked on a 14-day tour of Egypt.

The WCCC excursion, which began Dec. 28, is focusing on meetings by local citizenry with their counterparts in Egyptian fields of business, education, labor, economics and the arts.

"The Egyptian tour is an historic event, a rare combination of efforts, including a variety of representatives from our communities and professional walks of life" said Dr. Reginald Wilson, president of WCCC. "It will be an exercise in observing a different life style and culture, and an excellent opportunity for us to better know a portion of the Middle Eastern experience.

"We are especially pleased that the college will also be making formal presentations reflecting its institutional systems of operation. A significant goal of this trip will be to honor recent requests by Egyptian educators to highlight aspects of management and academic offerings presently available through WCCC as a national educational model."

Signifying what is truly an expanding "world view" of WCCC interests, the college's executive vice-president, Dr. Mostafa M. Afr, himself an Egyptian by birth, has facilitated the tour in conjunction with Egypt's Supreme Council for Higher Education. He foresees the magnitude of the January tour to provide future impetus for further international ventures by the college. Metropolitan area participants in the Wayne County Community College Egyptian Trip include students, homemakers, artists, teachers, educational administrators and corporate representatives from several major companies.

Joining key WCC administrators at its first management-oriented seminar in Egypt, at Cairo's Ain Shams University, was the Systems and Computer Technology Corporation (SCT), represented by its president and founder, Frederick A. Gross.

A second management seminar at Cairo University emphasized the application of management organization systems designed specifically for higher education. Dr. Wilson spoke on "The Role of the Community College in the United States," providing an overview of the philosophy and mission of community college institutions in American education. Seminar topics at Cairo University included presentations by Dr. Afr, "Management of Education Resources" and "Management Organization Systems Technique: (MOST)," delivered by Dr. Milan M. Chonich, director of development, and Steven M. Racine, director of budget and management.

Members of the college tour enrolled in a special seminar course offered for credit by the institution. The seminar, conducted by Dr. Wilson, Dr. Afr and Kandi Baba Kumasi, dealt with aspects of Egyptian culture, archeology and a historical "world-view", based upon group experiences acquired on the seminar-tour.

"Through an excursion into the practical, everyday world of Egypt, we hope to promote a better mutual understanding among our people" said Dr. Afr. "The schools and farms, the businesses, the bazars, the factories, all of these will become settings as vital to our trip's itinerary as the majestic sites for which Egypt is famous."

To document the land-mark expedition, the college is being joined by the local Public Broadcasting System affiliate, WTVS Television (Channel 56) which will assist in co-producing a film reflecting the 14-day experience.

Business and Cultural Affairs.

"As an educational institution, Wayne County Community College prizes this means of learning from as well as exchanging ideas and philosophies with the people of Egypt" Dr. Wilson said.

Administration rules change would aid mobile homeowners

Mobile home park tenants will get some extra protection in their lease agreements with park operators, if proposed changes in the Department of Commerce-Mobile Home Commission's rules survive the administrative rules process.

Changes in the rules, which will be the topic of a public hearing in Lansing Jan. 8, would require park management to offer leases to tenants for a minimum of one year. Current commission rules set the minimum at six months.

The proposed changes would also mandate that all mobile home sales under the commission's jurisdiction have a 5-day cooling-off period to give purchasers time to withdraw their offer. Currently, only sales of new mobile homes carry this stipulation.

Also for consideration at the hearing is a requirement that park management maintain an inventory checklist to determine damages incurred by tenants from the beginning to the end of their tenancy.

After public hearings administrative rules must be approved by the attorney general and the Joint Legislative Committee on Administrative Rules.

The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the commission offices, Corporation and Securities Bureau, 6546 Mercantile Way.

Copies of the proposed changes are available from the Michigan Department of Commerce, Corporation and Securities Bureau, Mobile Home Division, P.O. Box 30222, Lansing 48909.

Navy offers $2,000 bonus

The Department of the Navy recently instituted a $2,000 bonus for new recruits who enlist in the Navy's nuclear power training program.

This policy, effective Dec. 10, 1979, is designed to increase appeal for the Navy's top priority program by offering high school graduates between 17 and 24 career opportunities as electronics technicians, mechanics and electricians.

More than half the technicians and engineers presently employed at civilian nuclear plants received their initial training in the Navy's nuclear power program.

Commander Kenneth E. Galkin, executive officer of the Navy Recruiting District Detroit, explained: "Many nuclear-qualified applicants choose other training programs. A $2,000 bonus will persuade these highly qualified individuals to consider the nuclear field more closely."

Enlistment in the Navy's nuclear field entails a 6-year active duty obligation, with approximately two years of technical training. The bonus will be paid upon completion of the professional curriculum.

Earth reaches nearest point to sun this month

The year 1980 begins with the earth at its closest point to the sun and with two bright star clusters in view, says University of Michigan astronomy Professor Richard G. Teske.

"On Jan. 3, the earth, traveling along its ellipse-shaped orbit around the sun, will pass that place in the orbit that lies nearest the sun. We arrive at this point each year in early January," he said. "Six months later, in early July, the earth is at the place on its elliptical path that is farthest from the sun. The difference in the earth-sun distance between the two dates is more than three million miles."

Also in January, Teske noted, two star clusters, the Pleiades and the Hyades, may easily be seen in the constellation Taurus.

According to Greek mythology, the seven Pleiades and seven Hyades were half-sisters, the children of Atlas. Zeus rewarded the Hyades, entrusted with the care of the infant Bacchus, by giving them a place in the heavens. But their sisters, the Pleiades, gained a place in the sky when they were transformed by Zeus into celestial doves to save them from pursuit by the giant Orion.

Nearly overhead in mid-evening, the Pleiades are the best known cluster in the heavens, Teske added.

"To the naked eye, they appear as a compact group of six or seven stars. With binoculars, more than two dozen come into view. Lying about 400 light years from the sun, the cluster actually contains more than 150 stars, most of them invisible except in larger telescopes."

The U-M astronomer explained that the naked-eye stars of the Pleiades are examples of stars that rotate at very high speeds, spinning nearly 100 times faster than does the sun, a slowly rotating star which takes about 25 days to turn once upon its axis.

"The force exerted by their fast spin causes the bright Pleiades stars to bulge prominently at their equators. In fact, one of the Pleiades actually appears to be shedding gas because of its great rotational speed," Teske said.

"The entire Pleiades cluster is enveloped by a tenuous cosmic cloud of great extent, composed of gas atoms and minute flecks of icy materials. Photographs of the region show that the cloud shines by starlight reflected from the tiny particles in it, just as street-lamps and shopping center lights illuminate fog and low-lying clouds here on earth."

To the southeast of the Pleiades, Teske pointed out the V-shaped Hyades.

"Marking the Bull's head in Taurus, the group is the nearest to the sun of all the clusters, with the single exception of the Ursa Major cluster to which five Big Dipper stars belong."

The Hyades are dominated by the bright, reddish star Aldebaran, which is not a true member of the cluster.

"Aldebaran is an accidental intruder which lies half-way between the Hyades and ourselves," he explained.

Both the Pleiades and Hyades are examples of star groups called "open clusters," which remain bound together through the mutual gravitational pull of their members. Although about 1,000 such clusters are known, "astronomers suspect that there may be nearly 20 times that many in our galaxy that remain undiscovered."

"All the member stars of a cluster have had a common origin and share a common birth date. By comparing their characteristic brightnesses and colors with computer calculations, astronomers can determine the group's age," Teske said. "It is found that the Pleiades cluster is youthful by cosmic standards, being hardly more than fifty million years old, while the Hyades have an age 10 times that. By comparison our sun is indeed a senior citizen, with an age of four and a half billion years."

State history taught

The history of the State of Michigan is a subject long neglected in standard curricula on both college and high school levels. Wayne County Community College, however, has offered the course on a fairly regular basis. In fact, in this coming winter term, it will be taught at its Downriver Center in Taylor. The instructor will be Tom Jones of the Detroit Historical Museum.

Having done graduate work at the University of Michigan, specializing in local history, Jones has taught Michigan History at other centers of the college, as well as at Washtenaw Community College and Marygrove College.

Supplementing his presentations with slides, films, and field trips, Jones attempts to explain the present in terms of the past and the national historical events from the viewpoint of the local level.

"Local history has become extremely popular lately, and I have noticed this interest reflected in the students who sign up for the class."

Michigan History will be offered every Saturday from 8 to 11 a.m., starting Jan. 12, and lasting 16 weeks. Registration for the class is being offered at the Downriver Center on Northline Road between Telegraph and Allen Road in Taylor. Call 287-2860. Tuition is $16 per credit hour and free for senior citizens. Registration for the class can be completed between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. Jan. 3-5, from 1 to 8 p.m. Jan. 7-11 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 12. The course offers 3 credit hours.

Things that matter

The new Mormon controversy

By GEORGE PLAGENZ
United Feature Syndicate
I don't know what disciplinary action — if any — the Catholic Church would take against a Catholic who went around speaking in favor of abortion.

What if, in addition to taking a pro-abortion stance in public, he or she denounced the Catholic Church for opposing abortion? Would that person be officially silenced? Or excommunicated?
There was the case a few years ago in which a Catholic priest in Massachusetts refused to baptize the baby of a woman who had stated publicly that she believed women should have the right to choose for themselves whether to have an abortion.

Now the Mormon Church has excommunicated a feminist who has taken a public stand in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) — which the church opposes.

It is not clear, however, whether she was expelled for advocating ERA or for some uncomplimentary statements about the Mormon Church.

Certainly one can sympathize with an employer for firing an employee who rents a hall to bad-mouth the company.

What makes excommunication from the Mormon Church more serious than getting fired, however, is that expulsion from the church means expulsion from heaven — or at least from the best location in the afterlife.

To the Mormons there are three places where we may spend our next million years or so after we leave these earthly precincts. They base this on something St. Paul said to the people of the young church in Corinth.

Wrote Paul: "The sun has a splendor of its own, the moon another splendor and the stars another. So it is with the resurrection from the dead." (I Corinthians 15:41, 42)

That is, we will go to one of three locations on resurrection day. These locations will be as different from each other as the sun is different from the moon and the stars in brightness.

To put it in down-to-earth terms, it will be like the difference between spending eternity in Cleveland on one hand and Hawaii on the other — with maybe Dallas in between.

The Mormons don't put it quite that way. What they say is that the "celestial" or highest post-resurrection kingdom is where family relationships will be preserved. This is the kingdom Mrs.

The lower kingdoms (still open to her) are made up of individuals minus their family ties.

For all its strictness in doctrine and discipline, the Mormon Church has more than 4 million members throughout the world.

In this country, however, membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (the official name of the church) is down slightly from 2.8 million in 1971 to 2.6 million today, although the trend is upward again.

There also is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with a total U.S. membership of 186,000 and a slightly different set of beliefs.

This group is popularly known as Mormon, too (Mormon was a prophet of the church), although the Reorganized Church prefers not to be called Mormon.

The two churches have a common origin. Both claim Joseph Smith as their founder. But there was a split after Smith's death in 1844.

Brigham Young took one faction west with him to Utah, now the Mormon Church's world headquarters.

Smith's wife Emma and his brother William sided with the group which stayed behind and which later became the Reorganized Church, with headquarters in Independence, Mo.

The Mormons often have been the center of controversy — among other things for their practice of polygamy (officially renounced in 1890) and for excluding blacks (a practice which ended in 1978).

They also have, on the other hand, been held in high esteem for their lifestyle, which stresses good health habits, family togetherness and personal morality. Now controversy is enveloping the church anew. (copyright) 1979 United Feature Syndicate

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 3
Read 2 Corinthians 1:3-7

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matthew 28:20)
Mrs. Jones is a very old lady who had lost her only remaining child and now alone in the world. I was trying to comfort her when I remembered a game we had played with our two children when they were small.

We had moved to a city far from where the children had friends and relatives. For a while they could not seem to find friends and felt lost. We started making a list of those we knew loved and missed them. We would say, "Let's count the people you love and those who love you. There's David and Bill and Aunt Ruth." We named all we could and built up to the end with the most important: "Best of all, God loves you!"

The sense of security the children gained by pulling the warm blanket of human love about them and covering it with God's love calmed their troubled hearts.

Mrs. Jones and I played the game. We listed the nurses and the church circle ladies, then reached the final point together: "And best of all, God loves you." She beamed.

As I left I realized that God is the one who will never leave us, even to the end.

PRAYER: Be with us, Father, so that even when things seem bleak, we can feel Your comforting hand upon us. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: No one who knows Jesus is friendless.

Witnesses gather

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York recently sponsored a 2-day regional assembly for Jehovah's Witnesses at the group's assembly hall in Detroit.

Some 140 delegates from the Inkster East Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses and upwards of 1,007 delegates from the Detroit, Westland, and Garden City areas, attended the sessions.

Assemblies of this type are held semi-annually for the express purpose of training Jehovah's Witnesses and aiding them to become more productive in their christian activities.

The 2-day program, which was opened to the public, included a variety of talks on Bible subjects.

The theme scripture stressed repeatedly in its various aspects throughout the assembly was taken from John 15:8 in the Bible where Jesus himself said: "My father is glorified in this, that you keep bearing much fruit and prove yourselves my disciples."

The main discourse, given by H. Fetzik, a full-time minister for 28 years, was entitled: "Are You Proving Yourself To Be a Fruitful Disciple?"

This week's 'Editor's Log' is a good example of the license some of our staff takes under the guise of editorial copy.

While it is certainly true that the Editorial Dept. is a very important part of this newspaper group, it is not the only part.

Equal time as it were, it is only fair that the rest of the hard working staff at Associated Newspapers gets the recognition they deserve.

Within each newspaper is a group of people who are designated the Composition Dept.

Their job is to put together the materials supplied from the Editorial and Advertising Departments to create a finished product which is delivered to your door each week.

If the truth were known, more than likely it is this department that contributes the most to our final product.

Supervisor Virginia Roullier regularly applies her talents to improving the page layout supplied by editorial personnel. Often being called upon to make 'a silk purse out of a sow's ear.'

Working with Virginia are the following people whose efforts are not recognized often enough: Jackie Lyles, Kathy Wade, Pam Haase, Debbie Hanson, Dolores Gosienski, Chery Bailey, Joyce Holmes, Candy Cox, Russ White, Mary Porter and Gail Jorgensen. Gail, by the way, is the person who is forced to work with the editor on the Editorial pages. Quite a cross to bear!

Supporting the efforts of Composition is our Camera Department. Ken Peterson, John Haase and Tim Ford handle the assignments.

The press room staff, those folks who print the finished product are supervised by Greg Morrison and Ken Lindemann. Pressmen Steve Michalski and Rick Jewell keep the machines running, while James Jablonicky, Andy Rowland, Ronald Londberg, Mike Partin, Albert Irving, Jonnie Strahan, Tim Nutt, Ernest Shaw, and Robert Minton assist.

Once the newspapers are printed it is up to those folk in the Circulation Department to get it delivered to our great bunch of carriers.

Heading Retail Advertising is Fred Nesley, with Joan Hines running the Classified Ad Department. Working with them are the following people: Jeanette Hash, Judy Marshall, Judy Pelzman, Bob Johnston, Bert Osterberg, Pat Croo, Dan Klimkosky, Beth Jacobs, Harold Babbitt, Barbara Calandra, Steve Hatfield, Dwight Harbison, Theresa Fernegel, and Christine Sokol.

These are the people who provide our advertisers with the knowledge and know-how to get their message across to our readers.

Another group we could not do without is our 'keepers of the numbers,' the Accounting Department.

Headed by Cheryl Williams, who is assisted by Nina Willett, this duo keeps the wheels of progress well oiled.

And, of course, the cement holding the entire operation together is the Administrative Department.

Owner-Publisher, David J. Willett, is assisted by Donna Willett, Dorothy Jacobs, Mike Reddy and the Department Heads.

In addition to all of these people, we rely on a fine bunch of folk who insert our papers and deliver them to carriers' homes.

So you see, the Editorial Department is not the only part of this newspaper or any other.

The newspaper you receive each week reflects the efforts of many people who all bring a special talent to the job.

While we agree that Associated has a fine group of people in its editorial department, it also has a fine dedicated group in our other departments as well.

So sit back and read this week's newspaper. It is worth far more than $.25 you had to pay for it.

As we succeed in providing you with the information you need to be an informed citizen of your community, we have done what we have set out to do.

If, on the other hand, we do not provide you with that information, we would like to know about it.

After all, the people of Associated Newspapers are working for you.

Happy New Year!

By CARL LEVIN
U.S. Senator

are published by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, are available through the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Another major thrust for America is synthetic fuels. But synthetic fuels will not heat our homes or fuel our cars any time soon. They are a hope of the future. Conservation is the best bet for today.

One of the most promising of the energy alternatives for Michigan is gasohol, a blend of one part alcohol and nine parts gasoline. It is a particularly good alternative for Michigan because plentiful Michigan corn, potatoes and other products can be used to make the alcohol in gasohol.

And while it costs more today, gasohol has the advantage of providing up to 5 percent better mileage than regular and no-lead gas.

The gasohol mixture should be a part of the mix of approaches we take to solve the energy problem. We must continue private oil exploration, development of other domestic natural resources and use of public incentives for energy conservation and alternative energy research and development.

Western civilization is said to be in decline. The truth of that claim will be tested as we try to deal with our energy crisis.

We cannot allow ourselves to be hostages to the oil producing nations of the world.

Iran has highlighted the need.

The heart-wrenching tragedy of the American hostage situation in Iran may turn out to be a very disguised opportunity.

The events in Iran, to some extent at least, characterize the volatile Middle East. And the Iranian assault on our nation should make us think long and hard about the wisdom of having this country's energy lifeline tied to Middle Eastern oil.

As Iran and the oil embargo of 1973 have shown, this nation has mortgaged its future — and the note is held by nations who are willing to foreclose if our policies conflict with their interests.

The Iranian students may have finally taught us a very hard lesson: we must become energy dependent.

We must either take action to control our own future, or we must surrender our destiny to the control of those who own the resources that have powered us in the past.

The country has delayed taking effective action for most of a decade. We have slipped and stalled, trying to retain our footing in a pool of quicksand. We have been unable to summon the national consensus and unity needed to forge a new path into future energy independence.

But the response to Iran created, for the first time in a generation, a sense of national outrage. If we can harness that outrage before it slips away, we can secure the promise of an independent future.

The opportunity coincides with the lifting of federal oil regulations, giving windfall profits to oil companies. While the companies can still take a large share of the profits to find more oil, the public needs a portion to fund our shift from imported oil to resources such as coal, solar and wind energy, hydropower, gasohol and synthetic fuels.

We also must invest in conservation. Conservation is the cheapest way to cut energy consumption and cost, and the federal government offers tax credits for conservation efforts.

At least 15 percent of the first $2,000 spent on such energy-saving devices that go on furnaces, water heaters or chimneys can be credited against your federal income taxes.

Also up to $2,200 in tax credits is available for investment in renewable energy sources, such as sun and wind energy.

For more information, you should call the Energy Extension Service on its toll-free number, 1-800-292-4704.

Any home built before 1973, and many built since then, were designed to an era when energy costs were one-tenth of what they are today. A homeowner can cut energy use by at least half using the insulating techniques available on the market today. You should ask your utility company to do a free energy audit of your home.

Also suggest two manuals, 'The Energy-Wise Home Buyer,' for $2 and 'In the Bank... or up the Chimney?' for $1.70. The manuals, which

Home Heating Assistance Program

By ROBERT LAW
State Representative
36th District

The Legislature has again set up a Home Heating Assistance Program designed to help senior citizens and lower income working families pay their home heating bills this winter.

Legislation establishing the program for the third consecutive year was signed into law October 23, 1979. Under the bill, the program will be extended for at least two more years.

Is the program different from last year's program? Yes. Last year there was a restriction on how much liquid assets a person could own, but that restriction was eliminated by the Legislature this year.

Who administers the program? The state Department of Treasury, which administered the home heating relief program last year, is handling it again this winter.

Who is eligible? You are eligible to claim a home heating credit if you lived in Michigan at least six months of 1979. If you are single, you must have maintained your own household. Only one credit may be claimed for a household.

If you are a full-time student, you are not eligible if someone else claims you as a dependent.

I get public assistance; am I eligible? No. You do not qualify if you receive General Assistance or Aid to Families with Dependent Children (ADC).

I rent my household; can I claim a heating credit? Yes, if you qualify, you will receive a home heating credit regardless of whether you own your home or rent a home or apartment.

How much is the credit? The credit amount varies. In general, the lower your income and the more exemptions you have, the bigger the credit. Last year the average heating credit per household was slightly under $90, which is about what it is expected to be again this winter.

Your Exemptions	Standard Allowance	Income Ceiling
1	$200	$ 5,714
2	240	6,857
3	280	8,000
4	310	8,857
5	340	9,714
6 or more	370	10,571

For purposes of figuring the credit, the state established a so-called standard allowance for each household depending on the number of exemptions in the household. Beside your number of exemptions in the second column is your standard allowance. Your credit is your standard allowance less 3.5 percent of your household income. You will not get a credit if your household income exceeds the amount in the column on the right.

Sample Computation

John and Mary Jones had household income in 1979 of $6,200. They are both 65 years old, which entitles them to four (4) exemptions.
Standard Allowance	$310
Less: 3.5 percent of household income (.035 x $6,200)	217
Home heating credit	93

How do I get my credit? You claim your home heating credit on the same form used to claim a Homestead Property Tax Credit. Step-by-step instructions for filing a claim are found in the booklets these forms come in. Be sure to read the instructions carefully. If you are entitled to an Income Tax refund or Homestead Property Tax Credit, your home heating credit will be added to that refund check.

Where do I get the form I need? The Michigan Department of Treasury will send the forms to you if you are a senior citizen, veteran or qualified handicapped person who filed a 1978 Homestead Property Tax Credit claim. If you do not get the forms in the mail but you think you may qualify for the home heating credit, you can pick up forms at your bank or post office, or at any Michigan Department of Treasury office.

When do I have to file my claim? You should file as soon as you know the exact amount of your 1979 household income. The sooner you file, the quicker your claim will be processed.

Where can I get help if I have more questions? The instruction booklets for the Michigan Income Tax and Homestead Property Tax Credit list all Michigan Department of Treasury offices in the state. Free help is available from all of these offices.

If you need help free assistance and additional forms are available at all Michigan Department of Treasury offices.

Where credit is due!

By DENNIS FASSETT
ANP Managing Editor

With the holidays, and the beginning of the new year now behind us, it is again time to give credit to the people who have made this past year much easier.

My fine staff. I believe no other organization has a better or more dedicated group of people devoting their lives to bringing you your local news.

Sue McDonald, squeeze of the grape and deadline as well, has covered for her boss, making the sow's ear a silk purse once again.

Sports Editor Tom Mooradian has again provided his readers with his considerable insights into the sports scene of Western Wayne County. Tom's loyal following speaks well for his abilities.

While Chief Photographer Lothar Koneitzko has still yet to return to the job following his tragic automobile accident of nearly two years ago, he does stop by on a regular basis and provide us with his wisdom.

The man who assumed the nearly impossible job of filling in for Lothar during his absence, Tom Greenwood, staff photographer, has continued to improve his photographic technique and has now promised to give Lothar instruction upon his return.

Maureen Camps, staff writer assigned to the Westland and Inkster beats, has continued to author the stories that have captured the attention of the many readers of those communities.

Jim (Chas) Bradley, former clergyman and conscience of the newsroom, is currently assigned to the Canton Township beat, but his by-line often appears throughout these publications.

Carrie Young, newest member of the editorial staff, again captured state-wide recognition for her ability to ferret out the difficult story. Winner of the Michigan Press Association's first place honors for her investigative reporting on the plight of area seniors, Carrie has impressed everyone with her drive, ambition, and dedication to her chosen profession.

Lee Smith, the elegant lady from Belleville and Tecumseh, produces society material for our papers and always looks like she just walked out of the pages of Harper's Bazaar Magazine.

Kay DeBord, longtime member of this staff, has again provided her readers with the latest happenings on the society scene. Kay has done much to help restore the local flavor to these papers.

Diane Ferguson, 'general manager' of our Belleville office, is typical of the kind of people we are proud to call our own. Diane has been involved in her town for many years and has represented well, these papers in the area.

Bob Ameen, staff writer assigned to the Belleville-Romulus areas, has once again brought his unique talent to bear on his area.

These are the people who have worked the past year to help produce what we believe to be the best local newspapers around.

Throughout the year, I have been the beneficiary of their combined efforts.

While they never complain when readers overlook their contributions, I am, and remain fully aware of what they have done. They are the very backbone of these papers, and without them, we could not have managed to bring you the news and events of the past year.

Thank you staff.
Happy New Year everyone.

Dialogue with Tiger cage coach

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Sports Editor

Tom Niemi, his moon face flushed by a 72-42 defeat engraved by an aroused Wayne Memorial basketball team, offered a smile as he sat down in one of the many unoccupied seats in Westland John Glenn's gymnasium.

In front of him Cherry Hill and John Glenn were warming up for the finals of the Western Wayne Holiday Basketball Tournament Classic.

Niemi, in his seventh year as Belleville High's head cage coach, is off to his worst start. His team has lost six straight.

"We're shooting horrendously," sighed Niemi to the group of listeners who included a pair of veteran refs — Jim Tennant and Michael Brown. "When you can't hit the easy ones, everything looks bad."

Niemi paused. He knew and the people around him knew — that this could have been an exceptional year for him and his Tigers. But circumstances — like the exodus of some key players — have negated those prospects. And now he and his players are struggling.

"You know I don't think it was fair of you," Niemi said, aiming the dart at this writer, "when you wrote that 'I had my hand on the panic button' and later in the same article pointed out ... 'all except one player could have stayed at home.'"

There was a mortuary silence. Niemi broke it.

"You know I have coached some great teams and kids and these kids rank with the greatest because they know they have to work extra hard. And they aren't taking a defeatist attitude. When you have several children in a family you try to treat them all fairly and equally even though some may be more talented than others."

"I have always tried to be fair with my players, not because they are players, but because they are human beings," Niemi added, "and it hurts me to see that, or read anything otherwise."

How can anyone say anything after that comment?

Anyway, is it true — to change the subject — that Belleville is dropping out of the Western Wayne Holiday Classic? There were rumors to that effect spread during the two-day tournament at Glenn.

"I really don't know what to say," Niemi offered, "because I feel any comment on that subject should come from the athletic director. I do feel however that the tournament should be staged before Christmas, so that the teams and their coaches can get a break and spend at least a few days with their families."

Ron Hellier, Belleville's AD, was not available for comment.

But, a note on a press release from Don Domke, athletic director at John Glenn about the tournament, stressed that, "This is Belleville's last year in the tournament."

We hope that turns out to be erroneous.

There seemed to be more "ex" coaches at the two-day classic than cage fans. George Thompson Jr., the former Inkster High cage mentor, was on hand to watch his son, Greg, help Cherry Hill win the title for the third year in a row.

Also taking in the action was Gordie Davis, the former Glenn coach, who a year ago occupied the seat that rookie Dan Henry took over. Gordie skipped out of the gym before we could get a comment or two.

However, Dick McNally, who coached Cherry Hill for a dozen years before departing for Niles in September, was in the crowd and said: "Dave (Dave Bogataj, Spartan coach) has done an excellent job with this team. They really look good."

And what about your team at Niles, coach?

"Well, they are young and green," McNally said. And that translated means Niles is a couple of years away from being a contender.

"You know you're unbeatable."

"Thanks, coach."

ANP Sports Editor

There's something about Westland John Glenn that brings out the best in the Simmonses.

A year ago Floyd Simmons pumped in 28 points to lead Cherry Hill to an upset victory over John Glenn, 78-74, as the Spartans retained for the second year the Western Wayne Holiday Basketball Tournament Title.

Friday night, the same two teams met in the finals and Andy Simmons, Floyd's younger brother, tossed in 18 points to stake Coach Dave Bogataj's Spartans to a relatively easy 72-49 victory over the Westlanders.

"I felt the kids played a fantastic ball game," said Bogataj who is in his first year as head coach. "We broke their press thanks to Thompson (Greg) and Smith (Kevin). We also rebounded well."

"When the pressure was on, our kids responded," Bogataj continued. "Our bench also got the job done."

Cherry Hill reached the finals via a 64-49 victory over Belleville, while John Glenn's ticket there was an upset over natural rival, Wayne Memorial, 50-47.

Glenn's Dan Henry, also a rookie coach, said, "I knew that Cherry Hill was quicker than we are, so I figured we had to get ahead of them early in order to beat them."

"We played very intense and hard against Wayne," Coach Henry added, "and it was very difficult to be that tense two nights in a row."

Henry said that he was very pleased with the post Christmas present his kids gave him — the victory over Wayne Memorial. It was his first and so far only win as the Rocket mentor.

"We played with every muscle and fiber in our bodies against Wayne and we really wanted to win that one," he said.

Glenn and Cherry Hill have a rematch on Jan. 8 at Inkster, but the Spartans will resume Tri-River Conference competition on Friday, Jan. 4 at home to Southgate Schafer.

Glenn had the lead in the first minute of the game, 2-0, 4-2, when Kevin Thweatt and Tony Dalimonte exchanged baskets with Spartan center Aaron Gregory and guard Kevin Smith. Gregory picked up his third personal foul and departed from the battle before the end of the quarter.

In the meantime, Spartan baskets by Gary Williams, Thompson and Simmons put the defending champs out in front 8-4. Gregory made the tailend of a two-shot foul, then later fouled Dalimonte as he drove in for a layup. Dalimonte didn't complete

Salem wins Ott wrestling tourney

It went down to the last two weight classes and Plymouth Salem managed to pick up its second major invitational wrestling title by winning the Ott Tournament sponsored by Wayne Memorial.

Salem edged Montrose Hill-McCloy by three points, 170-167, to finish atop a field of eight teams. Coach Ron Kruger's grapplers walked off the mats with four gold medals — Jeff Brown (119), Mark Ross (126), Jerry Valchine (138) and Jess Powers (185) in capturing their second invitational title of the season.

Salem, earlier in the season, had successfully defended its Westland John Glenn tournament title.

"It (Ott Tournament) is the toughest tournament we have been in the past few years," said Coach Kruger who is preparing to host the Salem Tournament next week. "Obviously, when you win a tournament like this you're very happy about it."

Montrose's Tom Kasteel concurred with Kruger's assessment of the tournament, then added: "We shall return. This one was a good one."

Wayne, the host, finished fourth (86) behind Trenton (146), while Belleville was fifth (82½), followed by Adrian (79), Redford Thurston (54) and Garden City West (12½).

Wayne's Dave Shell was the top wrestler at 112-pounds as he disposed of Trenton's Alan Bergmooser, 6-4, in the finals, while Shell's teammate, Joe Glass, earned a first place at 126.

Wayne Coach John Wood was pleased with Shell and Glass' performances and commented that, "Shell is probably one of the underrated wrestlers around."

"One of these days they are going to take Shell seriously," Wood said. "He was seeded fourth in this tournament and won it."

Salem sealed the team victory when Powers pinned Montrose's Steve Dean in 4:16, and Montrose's 198-pounder, Mike Servern wasn't able to duplicate that feat against Belleville's Steve Cook. Servern won by a decision.

Darren Cline (above), an All-Area wrestler, and 1979 graduate of Romulus High School, has cracked the starting lineup as a freshman heavyweight for Ferris State College in Big Rapids. Cline was selected as the top heavyweight by Bulldog Coach Tom Kerns when FSC opened its wrestling season Dec. 1 at Holland. Darren posted a 37-3 prep wrestling record and was accorded three letters in the sport while at Romulus. Darren's parents, Grover and Elvira Cline, reside in Romulus.

Scramble for lead

Johnson Carbonic, usually noted for its offense, turned in a solid defensive performance to back up Rick Graziano's perfect goaltending to defeat Jake's Lounge 4-0 in a Wayne-Westland Over 30 Hockey League.

It was Johnson's seventh victory in 11 starts and it left the winners five points out of first place in the Bonkowski Division. They trail Futurama Engineering which has a 10-1 won-lost ratio.

The shutout was the first of the current campaign for Graziano who watched as teammates Ron Johnson fired in a pair of goals while Mike Dziurgot and Glen Stevenson each added one.

Futurama continued to win despite the absence of a couple of key skaters. But the league-leaders had their problems shaking off a pesky Tastee Freeze, 4-3.

Gordie Heesh's two goals led the winner's assault with Tony Ianni and Danny Thomas each scoring one apiece. Bill Ballou paced the losers with a pair of goals. Terry Carley chipped in the other tally.

The Jock Shop, getting excellent play from Jerry Grube, slipped past Brock Homes 5-3. Grube accounted for four of his team's five goals. John Clearwood notched the final score. Dennis Broge helped the winners with three assists.

Grube's scoring outburst lifted him into a tie for the league's lead in goals. Grube and Terry Carley each had 17 goals.

Getting on the scoresheet for Brock's were Tom Dilaura, Dave Zajac and Ken Carter.

Jack's Sports Center moved within a game of its division leading rivals by edging Extra Point Bar, 3-2. John Colligan, Mike Adamson and Vern Springer came up with goals to back up Larry Whicker's tough goaltending. Jack Bockstanz and Barry Anderson scored for the losers.

Casey gets 38 points at Oak Park

Romulus to face Southwestern

Coach Rod Hanna's search for a center apparently has ended.

Just before the holidays, the Romulus cage strategist switched 6-4 senior forward, Dave Casey, to the pivot and Casey responded with a superlative effort against Oak Park.

Casey tossed in a career high 38 points, did irreparable damage to the Parker's defenses as he nailed 21 rebounds, had four assists and a couple of steals to lead the Eagles to a surprisingly easy 84-68 victory.

It was Romulus' fourth victory in six starts. They'll take that record against Detroit Southwestern at 3:30 p.m., Tues., Jan. 8 when the Eagles resume competition.

"Southwestern traditionally is an outstanding basketball school," said Hanna who prepped at Detroit Pershing. "It will be a good test for us."

Hanna managed to play everyone against Oak Park who trailed by as much as 30 points in the second half. It was close only for the first eight

Although they have now won the past three Western Wayne Holiday Classic basketball tournament titles, Cherry Hill did it for the first time Friday night for first-year coach Dave Bogataj. Bogataj's cagers, seen above waving their index fingers traditional for the No. 1 team, rocked Belleville in the first round Thursday night and came back the following night to destroy the hosts to successfully defend their title. Next year the tournament shifts to Inkster where the Spartans will be seeking an unprecedented fourth championship. Photo by Tom Greenwood.

Wayne puts it together against Belleville

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Sports Writer

One day too late... That's the way Coach Steve Schwartz put it after his Wayne Memorial Zebras buried Belleville 76-42 in the consolation game of the Western Wayne Holiday Basketball Classic at John Glenn Friday night.

"We were one day too late," Schwartz lamented. "If we had played this way against Glenn Thursday night, I feel we would have won the tournament."

Wayne was upset by the winless Rockets, 50-47, in the opening round as Coach Dan Henry won his first varsity game.

Aiding the Zebras' demise in their confrontation with crosstown rival Glenn was the fact they hit only one of 13 field goal attempts in the second period. But it was an entirely different story Friday as Wayne jumped to a 16-13 first quarter edge and led by a healthy 38-22 halftime margin.

And it only got worse from then on for Coach Tom Niemi's Tigers.

Forward Rick Rogers and guard Bob Kost each drilled in two field goals in the opening stanza for Wayne while guard Cory Allison drove for six points for Belleville. Wayne's height advantage began to assert itself in the second period as 6-foot-3 forward Andy Daily ripped the cords for 10 of his 16 points. Kost

Wayne "counted the Kost" and Belleville "paid the price" as the 5-9 senior Wayne guard pumped in six points in the third quarter to give his club a commanding 57-30 lead going (Continued on Page B-3)

Spartans surprise Wayne Tankers chalk up big victory

The Spartans are back. After a disastrous first year as Cherry Hill's swim coach a year

Beerbower's tankers chalked up their third consecutive dual meet victory of the campaign last week by surprising previously undefeated Wayne Memorial, 97-75. It was Cherry Hill's third win in four starts. They have beaten Fordson and Willow Run, while they dropped a 93-79 decision to Livonia Bentley in the opener.

"We had only 11 swimmers a year ago," Beerbower said. "Obviously, we weren't going to do much with that kind of depth. This year we have over 20 swimmers and I'm really pleased at the kind of progress we're making."

Beerbower won't get an argument about that from Wayne Memorial's Jim McPartlin. McPartlin, who annually fields one of, if not the finest, team in the Great Lakes, commented that "Cherry Hill is a greatly improved team from a year ago."

Wayne took the opening event, the 200-yard medley relay with Mike Soules, Tim Butler, Mark Gallagher and Scotty Martin, then the Zebras managed to win four other events. The Zebras racked up a double victory with Steve Matheny who turned in a 1:54.9 for the 200-yard freestyle, then fought off Dave Linden to win the 500-yard freestyle by an eyelash.

Curt McNamara led the Spartans as he carded a pair of victories. McNamara was the first to finish in the 200-yard individual medley (2:09.3), then earned a first in the 100-yard butterfly and anchored the Spartan freestyle relay team which coasted past its counterpart.

Handy Andy

Following in his brother Floyd's jumpshot, Andy Simmons (55) fired in 18 points Friday night to lead Cherry Hill to an easy 72-49 conquest of John Glenn to win the Western Wayne Holiday Cage Tourney for the third consecutive year. Last year, Floyd Simmons, who is now performing on the college level, scorched the nets for 28 points as the Spartans upset favored Glenn, 78-74, in the tourney title tilt.

Spartans stretch Belleville losing streak to 4 games

Cherry Hill made it to the Western Wayne Holiday basketball tournament finals with comparative ease. The two-time defending champ rallied past Belleville 64-49 in the first round of the tournament at Westland John Glenn on Thursday.

Glenn stunned arch-rival Wayne Memorial for its first win.

Belleville looked as if it had finally found a winning combination as Coach Tom Niemi's Tigers took a narrow 16-15 edge in the first period.

But when Aaron Gregory tossed in a short jumper to put Cherry Hill up 17-16 early in the second period, it was the last time Belleville saw the lead. The Tigers went cold for the next 16 minutes and scored a total of 10 points for the second and third frames.

"We went to a man-to-man defense early in the second period," Cherry Hill Coach Dave Bogataj explained. "That seemed to hurt them. They made some key turnovers and we managed to capitalize on them."

With Gary Williams and Gregory supplying the bulk of 13 points in the second stanza, and senior guard Greg Thompson coming through with the assists, Cherry Hill built up leads of 28-21 and 45-26 for the second and third periods.

Thompson did plenty of damage to the Tiger defenses. He forced senior guard Charlie Blackmon to the sidelines after Blackmon fouled the shift and quick Thompson on breakaways to the basket.

Although Belleville outscored the defending champ, 23-19, in the fourth period the outcome of the game was never in doubt after the initial half.

Four Cherry Hill cagers reached double figures. Gregory's 15 points stood up as the game's high. Gary Williams and Thompson split 26 points evenly between them and Kevin Smith added 10.

Scott Straight's 13 points were tops for the Tigers who have failed to find the winning column in their first five games of the season.

minutes which finished 16-14 with Romulus ahead. Casey and Dave Holifield then went to work. Casey sank eight of his points and Holifield scored 12 of his 18 in the second period as the Eagles pulled away 42-30 at halftime.

Casey came back in the third period with the rebounds while sophomore guard Bobby Stewart provided the assists — he had 18 of them — to polish off their hosts.

Casey made 17 of his attempted 27 shots from the field, a hefty 63 percent, while Holifield and Schick counted 18 and 14 points, respectively, and Stewart chipped in with 10.

Hang in there, Williams!

Senior Gary Williams, surrounded by Rockets in the Western Wayne Holiday Cage Tourney final Friday night, wrestles Glenn's Tony Dalimonte for the ball. Kevin Thweatt reaches up from the floor to steal the prized possession while Dave Ward (42) also stands ready. The struggle was close on this play but Cherry Hill cruised most of the way in winning the championship game 72-49 for the third consecutive year. Glenn (now 1-5) gets a return shot at the Spartans (4-2) on the latter's home court at 8 p.m. next Tuesday, Jan. 8.

the three-point play but that was the last the Rockets had to contend with the lanky Spartan center who departed for the sidelines with three fouls.

Thweatt's jumper cut the margin to 9-8, but Williams countered with a backdoor layup and after a turnover that gave the ball back to the Spartans, Thompson drove in for a basket to put the Spartans up, 13-8. Then, Tom Smith hit on a southpaw jumper, his first of seven baskets, as the quarter ended.

Glenn couldn't stop Simmons in the second period. The 5-11 senior made a pair of jump shots while the Westlanders missed seven of their next eight free throws in the first 2½ minutes of the quarter.

Williams then sank a pair of free throws and a basket and Simmons got another jumper to increase the margin to 23-15 and another pair of Williams' free throws gave the Spartans a 10-point edge, 25-15, with 3:45 left in the half.

Liedel got his first bucket of the game to make it 25-17, but Smith's lay-up again made it a 10-point difference. Wes Whitner, Dalimonte and Thweatt made six straight free throws in the stretch to pull the hosts within five (32-27) as the quarter ended.

Glenn came out with a full-court press in the second half and Thompson, a quick and smart junior guard, had no trouble handling the pressure. His assist on a Simmons' basket and his layup gave the Spartans some breathing room. Then Simmons sank a couple of free throws and Thompson stole the inbound pass and went in unmolested for a layup to put the champs up 42-31.

That last basket called for a Glenn time-out and Henry talked over the situation with his Rockets.

Wayne Woodard, came up with a pair of Glenn baskets and Smith hit on another one of his jump shots near the key but the Spartans still managed to keep a 10-point lead the rest of the way.

Ahead 51-39 going into the fourth period, Coach Bogataj decided to reactivate Gregory who responded with two quick baskets after Woodard got his third jumper. Two minutes into the final period, Cherry Hill was out in front 57-43 and another basket by Gregory, who had 11 points in the last eight minutes, sealed the victory.

Simmons' 18 points were high for the game, while Gregory added 16. Thompson and Williams each had 14 points for the Spartans who made 16 of 29 at the free throw line.

Glenn received 14 points from Smith and 10 from Dalimonte, the only two Westland players to make it into double figures.

Glenn upsets Wayne to post 1st victory

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Sports Writer

John Glenn Coach Dan Henry never thought it would take his Rockets this far into the season to notch his first victory as a varsity cage coach.

But the rookie mentor who replaced retired veteran coach Gordie Davis this year parlayed Glenn's best overall performance and Wayne's worst game into a victory for the Rockets.

Henry employed an array of changing defenses to throw the Zebras off balance and claim an exciting 50-47 win in the opening round of the Western Wayne Holiday Tournament. Glenn's tenacious defenders fell behind 15-10 after the first period, but a swirling man-to-man and match-up zone defense by Glenn's small quick hoopsters limited Wayne to just four second quarter points.

The Rockets meanwhile were scoring on fast-breaks for a 15-4 quarter advantage and a 25-19 halftime margin. Glenn continued to harass the Zebras into mistakes, forcing Coach Steve Schwartz' crew into bad percentage shots in that fatal second stanza.

"We're not taking anything away from the way John Glenn played, but it definitely was our worst game of the year," explained Schwartz. "We only made 18 of 58 shots from the floor during the game and our horrible second quarter was our downfall. We only made one of 13 shots in that period."

Glenn came out steaming in the third quarter and even though Schwartz had his Zebras employing a different pace, the Rockets managed a 14-11 edge in the period and a 39-30 lead after three. Wayne out-dueled Glenn 17-11 in the frantic final frame but it was the classic story of too little, too late.

"We rallied at the end, but we just waited too long to do so," said a discouraged Schwartz, now in his second year as Zebra cage strategist.

On the other hand, Henry was exuberant after beating Glenn's arch-rival. "Our kids really wanted this game against Wayne," he said. "We worked very hard to prepare for them, because talent-wise, they have a better team than we do. But our boys worked hard scrimmaging some good teams to get ready for Wayne. They played with every muscle and fiber of their body and that makes me very proud as their coach."

Trailing 39-30 entering the final frame, Wayne rallied to close the gap to 46-45 with one minute left in the game. But Glenn got a big break when its "purest shooter," by Coach Henry's description, was fouled and went to the foul line. The 5-10 excellent athlete, who is outstanding in football, calmly hit the bottom of the basket with both free throws to virtually clinch Coach Henry's first varsity victory.

However, Wayne wasn't done yet and the fighting Zebras forced a turnover with 25 seconds left. Their valiant efforts fell just short as both teams scored two points for the final 50-47 margin.

Glenn's dogged defense threw a noose around Wayne's attack and did not allow any Zebra scorer to hit double figures. The Rockets were especially effective against guard Bob Kost and 6-3 forward Andy Daily, who both were instrumental in Wayne's demolishing of Belleville the following night.

Glenn held Kost to eight points and Daily to only five. Meanwhile, Liedel, hitting from the corners and top of the key, drilled in six baskets and both free throws for a game-high 14 points. Teammate Tony Dalimonte joined him in double figures with three buckets and 4-of-5 from the charity stripe for 10 markers.

But it was not Glenn's offense that won this low-scoring game that saved the electricity on the scoreboard. It was the tenacious defensive play of Liedel, Dalimonte, Wayne Woodard, Wes Whitner, Kevin Thweatt, Dave Ward and Smith that dashed the hopes of the Zebras.

Wayne Memorial entered this tournament with the best chance to win the title in a long time, but Glenn continued its mastery over its crosstown rival.

The Zebras, who entered the tourney as co-favorites along with eventual winner Cherry Hill, belted Belleville, 76-42, in the consolation game for third place honors. Wayne's record now stands at 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the Great Lakes 8 as it prepares to host always tough Dearborn Fordson at 8 p.m. Friday night.

Glenn, meanwhile, came out of the holiday classic with mixed emotions. After presenting Coach Henry with his first varsity victory against Wayne, the Rockets were blown out 72-42 by Cherry Hill in the championship game.

Glenn will get a quick return match against Cherry Hill when the Rockets invade Spartanland next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in a non-league encounter. The Rockets' 1-5 record is its worst start in years but Coach Henry looks for more performances like the one against Wayne Memorial — and several more rewarding victories before the curtains fall on the cage campaign.

Breakaway

Sandwiched between two closing defenders, Cherry Hill's Kevin Smith (dark jersey) is attempting to sidestep Westland John Glenn's Tony Dalimonte (15) and Tom Smith (20). Smith played an exceptional game to fire up the defending Western Wayne Holiday Classic champs to a victory over the hosts. The victory was the fourth for Coach Dave Bogataj's Spartans and it was the fifth loss in six starts for the Westlanders who have a rematch with Cherry Hill in Inkster on Jan. 8.

Stevens, Callegari named to all-Great Lakes '8'

Despite a third-place finish, Wayne Memorial had two of the finest players in the Great Lakes 8 girls basketball league this season.

Named this week to the all-league first team was Peggy Stevens, a 5-8 senior forward who averaged 12 points a game. Theresa Callegari, a talented 5-10 junior center, who set three Wayne Memorial rebounding records, made the second all-league squad.

Making all-league honorable mention from the Zebras' 10-4 team were senior Kim Mason and juniors Cindy Dunn and Kelly Reinink. Coach Steve Schwartz girls' team finished with a 13-7 overall ledger.

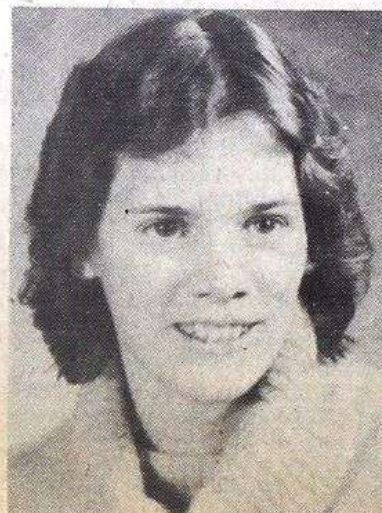

Wayne's only losses in league play came from two each at the hands of co-champions, Dearborn Fordson, which placed two on the all-league team, and Monroe, which had one all-conference selection. Wayne suffered a heart-breaking two-point loss, 40-38, to Fordson at home and a 47-44 defeat to Monroe on the Zebra court.

The Zebras, who won the Great Lakes 8 championship in 1977, had a junior varsity club with an 11-3 league record and figures to be tough again on the varsity level.

Miss Stevens led the team in overall scoring and was high scorer in nine of the team's 20 games. She also had six games with double-digit scoring. Peggy scored 231 points this season and 150 last year as a junior for a 381 career total of nearly 10 points a game.

She also hauled down an average of eight rebounds a game.

Aiding her on the boards was the talented Theresa Callegari, who set three new school records as a junior. The 5-10 center hit a new mark of 238 rebounds, including 21 against Livonia Franklin, and finished with an average of 11.9 caroms per game.

PEGGY STEVENS

The talented hoopster also collected 20 caroms against Garden City East and was in double figures rebounding in 15 of Wayne's 20 games. Theresa has scored 126 and 196 points, respectively, the past two years for an average of 8.7. She should be a really outstanding player in her senior year.

Kim Mason was named Wayne Memorial's "Most Dedicated Player" and honorable mention all-league. She was recognized as the best defensive forward in the Great Lakes 8 League and missed making the all-league squad by just one vote.

Kim was second leading rebounder for the Zebras and was in double figures in rebounding in 13 of 20 games.

Linda Leabu earned the Wayne

Memorial High School Coaches' Award for "sportsmanship, effort, coachability and all-around team spirit."

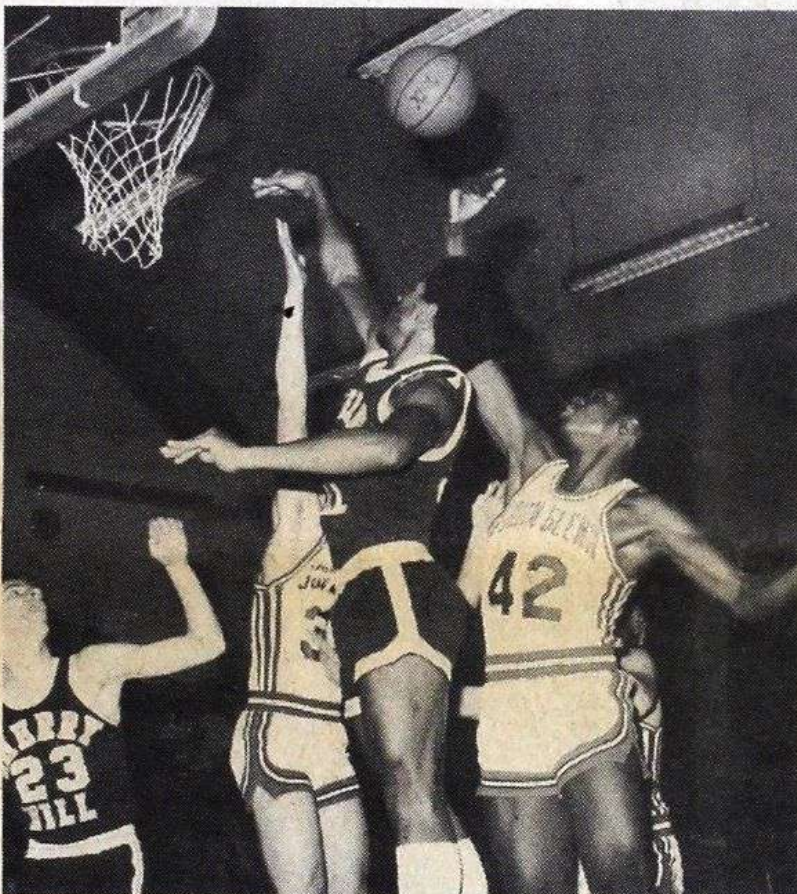

Fordson and Monroe tied for the league title with 13-1 records and their coaches, John Kreger of Fordson, and Monroe's Wayne Rumble, tied for "Coach of the Year" honors.

Fordson's Debi Siegwald, a 5-10 senior center, was unanimously named the league's "Most Valuable Player" by pumping in 19 points and pulling down 12 rebounds a game.

Rebounds attract bodies and in this case Westland John Glenn's Dave Ward (42) and teammate Dave Cesarz (34) duel with Cherry Hill's Mike Johnson (dark jersey) for possession of the elusive ball. Grounded on the side is Gary Williams (23). The two-time defending champ beat Glenn in the championship round to retain for the third straight year the coveted Western Wayne Holiday Classic Championship.

MVP

Former All-Area track and cross country star, Mark Michalowski, (at left) was named the most valuable cross country runner at Adrian College for 1979 at a recent sports banquet held on campus. Michalowski, shown here with Coach Bill Kenyon, also received a varsity letter and was named co-captain of the cross country squad for next year. A freshman majoring in business administration at the college, he is a 1979 graduate of Wayne High. Mark is the son of Rosemary Munro of 33219 Creston, Westland.

into the final quarter. Kost also played a stellar floor game and hawked the ball on defense for a fine performance. He and Andy Daily were the two standouts for Wayne. Kost was deadly from the key, pumping in seven field goals and two of five from the line. Daily dropped in four buckets and 8-of-13 charity tosses.

Belleville did not place a single scorer in double figures as 6-3 senior forward Jeff Patterson led with three baskets and a free throw for seven points. "It was a good tournament," said Belleville coach Tom Niemi, "unfortunately our shooting percentage was horrendous. Everything looks bad when you shoot bad."

"However, the kids worked hard and battled all the way, and I'm proud of them," he added. Belleville hit 17 baskets and 8 of 17 from the free throw line.

Meanwhile, Wayne dropped in 27 of 74 floor shots and 22 of 42 charities.

Now Schwartz, whose team sports a 4-2 record and 2-1 in the Great Lakes 8, prepares to host always dangerous league foe Fordson at home tomorrow night at 8 p.m. "We're looking for a very tough battle — they've got a real good team again this year," Schwartz said.

Winless Belleville, in its worst start in seven years under Niemi, takes its 0-6 record to Southgate this Saturday night for a non-league encounter.

Holidays mean one thing — togetherness

By LEE SMITH
Suburban Living Editor

Despite the outrageous price of gasoline and the high cost of driving (and flying), swarms of singles, couples and families converged on the area over the holiday-of-holidays weekend.

THE RAY VAN BUHLERS of Venetian Avenue had their daughter, Gwen, home for part of the week before her husband, John Cleary, joined them on the 21st. The young couple, who are living temporarily in Manistique, had to leave Belleville the next day for their home in Wakefield, R.I. and holiday festivities with John's family.

Before their departure, however, the Van Buhler family had a mini-Christmas celebration at the Kyoto Japanese Steak House in Fairlane Center. Seated at the table for eight and enjoying the showmanship that goes with a Japanese dinner were Ray and Lee and daughters, Janet and Joan, son Gary from Ypsilanti, Gwen and John and Paul Bassett.

THE HILLS — Art and Joy — were looking forward to meeting the plane from San Diego, Calif. which would bring their daughter and son-in-law, Diane and Gary Bodenmiller, home for the holidays. Greg, Jean and Brian Hill were expected in from Midland and the newlyweds, Laurie and Curt Cilia, were coming in from Westland to complete the family picture. And, naturally, the focus was on that little grandson and nephew, Brian, who was at the fun age of 14 months and up-and-at-'em this year!

JOHN AND MARGE ROBERTS of Lake Pointe Pass enjoyed the company of their daughter Vickie, her husband Mike Barnett, and their trio, Tytti, Connie and Michael, for a week — the quintet having arrived from Lewisville, Tex.

The Barnetts divided their time between her parents and his, the Taft Barnetts, and then traveled to Cleveland, Ohio with the Robertses for a holiday visit with John's sister and husband, Ann and Earl Bluit, before bidding 'adios' and heading homeward once again.

LOTS AND LOTS of folks seemed to be heading southward and Arizona-ward for reunions with loved ones or re-runs of previous warm-weather meetings. But since the E-R doesn't advertise that people have left their homes, we're not able to elaborate on who's where.

JUDGE JIM STONE and his wife, Jean, broke with tradition this season and were guests, rather than hosts, at Christmas dinner. Bowing to their daughter Sandie's wishes, they, along with other members of their family, drove to Livonia for the gathering of the clan.

Sandie and her husband Tom Olenczuk set their table to also include Tom's mother, Carol Olenczuk; Jim and Ann Stone and son, Jeff, of Northville; Tom Stone, Judi Krizan and son, Matthew, of Wayne; Jim and Peg Krizan of Livonia, and of course, their own trio — Tommie, David and Steven.

One of the special touches of the day was the gift of ceramics which the hostess made and presented to her guests.

TWO BELLEVILLE COUPLES — Bill and Flo Hudge of Elwell Road and Jim and Shirley Hudge of Rawsonville Road — journeyed to Tecumseh Christmas Day to help share the Bert Smith's first Yuletide in their new home.

Also having part in the four o'clock potluck dinner were Ed and Mary Anne Hudge and their two daughters, Nancy and Nora, and Sue Smith, all of Ann Arbor; Mike and Cindy Hudge and Teresa Hudge of Belleville; Luanne and Pete Schonfeld and their 7-months-old son, Matthew, who were in from Evanston, Ill. for four days; and Carol Smith, who was home from her junior classes at Western Michigan University.

NORM AND CHAR McNALLY and family of Edgemont Street and Ray and Leona Van Buhler and family drove to St. Clair Shores on the 25th for dinner with Howard and Marie McNally and their bunch.

On Friday the Van Buhlers completed their "family bit" by getting together with some 25 adult members of Ray's family. Held in Belleville at the Henry Street home of Gloria Polzin, the party was co-hosted by her brother, Wally Van Buhler of Royal Oak. Bob and Odalee Hoeft of Wabash Street helped complete the family scene, the others traveling from Wyandotte, Dearborn, Plymouth and Taylor.

MAYOR AND MRS. Justin Emerson played host at dinner on Christmas Day at their home on Madelon Street. Present for the four o'clock feast were Rick and Mindy Emerson and their 8-month-old son, Michael, from Lansing and Bellevillites, Bill and Mary Ann Emerson with Billy and Betsy of Martinsville Road and Joe and Helen Sietz of Sumpter Road. The Connecticut and California contingents, because of distance, were missing from this season's dinner table.

DR AND MRS. Gerry Miller of Stanley Drive had the company of their son, Jeff, for a whole week and that of their daughter, Pam, for four days this Yuletide — the two both flying in from the East Coast.

Dinner for the foursome took place early — at one o'clock — so that Pam could make her flite to Milford, Conn. and be back to her work as an attorney for General Electric in Stamford on the 26th. Jeff had until the 27th before his departure for New York City where he is part of the research team for lung transplants at Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx.

Pam's friend, Brian Newhouse of New Haven, Conn., drove in from his parents' home in Galion, Ohio to spend a day with the Millers.

TREE FESTIVITIES for members of the Joseph Sietz family took place at the Martinsville Road home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mary Ann and Bill Emerson.

Taking part in the Christmas Eve fun, which included a potluck supper and gift exchange, were Dick and Grace Sietz and their two youngsters, Whitney and Bradley, of Trenton.

The highlight of the evening (which certainly must have made Joe's broken hip feel just a bit better) was a performance of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" — their very own version — by the four grandkids, Billy and Betsy Emerson and their cousins, Whitney and Brad.

DINNER WAS AT three o'clock Christmas Day at Kurt and Jayne Atchinson's home on East Huron River Drive. Guests were her mother, Daisy Thomas of Liberty Street, and her brother and date, Victor Thomas and Patti Brode both of Grand Rapids.

Earlier in the day the Atchinsons, along with their boys Todd and Craig, enjoyed a telephone greeting from the senior Atchinsons — Dutch and Merle — who are wintering in Vero Beach, Fla.

And on Saturday the foursome welcomed another of Jayne's brothers, Ron Thomas, his wife Carol, and their quartet — Ronnie, Marce, Joe and Jenny — for a re-run of the holiday and an overnight visit.

THE TABLE at the home of Art and Verdys Shephard of Elwell Road was set for 16 and at one o'clock the family sat down to a ham dinner prepared in its entirety by their hostess.

Exchanging "Merry Christmases" with each other were Verdys' brother and wife, Dick and Ivy Jahnke of Montrose; Roger, Diane, Shawn and Shari Ferguson of Harris Road; Leslie Ferguson and Janet Bachman; Jim, Pat, Daryle and Kim Shephard of Sumpter Road, and Brian and Nancy Shephard of Henry Street.

That same evening the senior Shephards, the Fergusons and Fay and Mary Ferguson of Judd Road were invited to a holiday buffet at the Hannan Road home of Bob Ferguson. Hostess for the occasion was Bob's friend, Betty Bachman.

ANOTHER FAMILY enjoining the new addition of a grandchild to their holiday this season was that of Larry and Bev Eichold. Filling the roles of host and hostess for a three o'clock ham and turkey feast, they centered their attention on little Jamie Smither, Kim's and Mike's 5-month-old, who proved to be more important than food that day.

Also in on the "first" were great-grandmothers, Gladys Adler of Howell and Mary Mumford of Belleville; Larry's sister Becky, her husband Bill Chubb, and their little son, Erik, of Taylor as well as Jeff and Debbie Eichold and Deb's friend Phil Shanks of Belleville.

AN EARLY HOLIDAY celebration was held on the 23rd at Fay and Mary Ferguson's home on Judd Road. An evening buffet and exchange of presents was in the offing for Bob Ferguson and his two children, Donna and Mike, Betty Bachman, and the Roger Ferguson family, all of Belleville; Richard and Lenny Ferguson and family of Plymouth and Jim and Marie Doser and son Steven from Dexter.

Carroty salads

Don't let hasty meal planning keep you from nutritious meals. This easy-to-make Sunset Salad combines Jell-O lemon flavor gelatin, crushed pineapple and grated carrot, which is a good source of vitamin

Salads featuring carrots

If you have a household of working people going in different directions daily, most likely you face the problem of hectic meal planning. Even so, you want to plan menus that have appetite appeal and are good sources of nutrients to meet everyone's needs.

Let's assume Saturday takes the usual route — last-minute planning. You note that there is plenty of leftover ham for slicing, cans of tomato soup on the shelf and fresh rolls you purchased on the way home Friday afternoon. But where's the eye-appeal for an exciting quick lunch? And, what about nutrients?

Fortunately, you know you have the makings for a molded Sunset Salad that can be made in minutes with an electric blender. You can have this salad chilled and ready to unmold in little over an hour. The salad combines crushed pineapple and grated carrot in Jello-O lemon flavor gelatin. You're glad carrots are included because they're a good source of vitamin A that facilitates normal bone growth and helps keep eyes and skin healthy.

As for the nutrition aspect of meals, remember the body chooses what it needs from the nutrients in the food that's eaten to keep repairing and building itself up. To help you plan meals, simply use foods from these four major categories grouped on the basis of their nutrient content:

1. Meat Group, which includes poultry, fish and eggs to supply protein, iron and the B vitamins.
2. Milk Group, including ice cream, cheese and yogurt, good sources of vitamins A and D as well as calcium to build strong bones and teeth and maintain a well-running nervous system.
3. Vegetable-Fruit Group, source of vitamins A and C to keep skin, eyes and gums healthy as well as body tissues firm and healthy.
4. Bread-Cereal Group, with its whole grains, enriched bread and cereal products which provide protein, iron and several vitamins. This last group includes rice, noodles, macaroni and spaghetti, bases for many of your favorite recipes.

After you've prepared this quick lunch, check the foods and the nutrients each food offers. All groups are represented, and deliciously, too. Should there be a similar Saturday of hasty lunch planning, why not try the Carrot and Cabbage Salad, another appealing salad prepared with Jell-O gelatin and vitamin-rich vegetables? You owe it to your family.

Sunset Salad

- 1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in juice
- 1 package (3 oz.) lemon flavor gelatin
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups crushed ice
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar
- 1 cup grated carrots

Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add water to juice to make 1/2 cup and bring to a boil. Combine measured liquid, gelatin and salt in electric blender container. Cover and blend at low speed until gelatin is dissolved, about 1 minute. Add ice and lemon juice, cover and blend at high speed until ice is melted. Add pineapple and carrots and pour into a 4-cup mold or individual molds. Chill until firm, about 1 hour. Unmold. Serve with crisp lettuce, if desired. Makes 4 cups or 8 servings.

Cabbage and Carrot Salad

- 1 package (3 oz.) lemon flavor gelatin
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup boiling water
- 3/4 cup cold water
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 cup grated carrots
- 1 cup finely shredded cabbage

Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling water. Add cold water and vinegar. Chill until thickened. Fold in carrots and cabbage. Pour into a 3-cup mold or individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with crisp lettuce and mayonnaise, if desired. Makes about 3 cups or 6 servings.

Note: Mixture may be chilled in serving bowl; do not unmold.

Enroute to work last Wednesday, J.P. (of WJR fame) was requesting that listeners call him regarding their most outstanding memories of the past decade (proving that DJ's can really wing it by simply coming up with a good gimmick or question.) Were it as simple to fill a weekly column!

It DID make me stop to wonder, though, what I might have added were I prone to calling radio stations to include my two cents worth.

The surprise and thrill of having a Polish cardinal made Pope, and having him turn out to be such a super humanitarian. . . The unbelievable of the whole Watergate mess and the eventual resignation and disgrace of a national leader. . . The poor prospects for president which cropped up just before the demise of 1979. . . The scary spiraling oil prices!

The horror at Jonestown in Guyana came to mind immediately as did the murder of a Belleville couple — one a co-worker and long-time acquaintance.

The sudden and unexpected passing of three of our parents within weeks of each other and the eventual loss in two years of a dear mother-in-law after a long seige with cancer. . . The birth of a wonderful little boy which gave us the honorable titles of "grandparents".

The end of the Vietnam conflict. . . Hank Aaron breaking the Babe's homerun record. . . the loss of Bing, Elvis, Groucho, Jack Benny, John Wayne, Betty Grable, Joan Crawford, Louie Armstrong.

The deaths of De Gaulle, Krushchev, Nasser, Mamie, Hubert, LBJ and Truman. . . the terrible hostage situation in Iran.

Pulling up roots and settling into a brand new location after a lifetime in Belleville. . . The debut of new friendships — the sad and bewildering loss of old ones.

Had I not become captive for two hours to a beautifully done television show, "The Shining Season", there could have been a bit more soul-searching done for that list but, after that bout of weeping and sobbing (what a sad, sad story), I couldn't settle down to column thinking once again.

I DID take time to check on those missing on the local business-political-school scene and came up with the following people who left us in the 70's — Ted Kuckelman, Bus Roberts, Dick Hamilton, Todd Fry, Ray Clift, Tee Amerman, Wylie Pitcher, Bert Merritt.

Merle Barker, Elsie Roberts, Mike Kozma, Eben Smith, John Tontalo, Jean Steinhour, John Barber, Bill Burhop, Ann Rogalle, Jack Harris.

Carl Simmons, Howard Gilman, Helen Joseph, Russell Price, Harold Cullin, Ted Thetford, Harry Hidenfelter, Mike Mlsna, Russell Van Buhler.

I think each of us can look back and find that those 10 years brought us sorrow, joy, fulfillment, disappointment, anger, shock, and now — expectancy for what lies ahead in the new era. Hopefully, we will find the world in less turmoil and our country once again in a prestigious position.

WHATEVER HAPPENED to those good old leaded icicles for trimming trees? Do yours, too, reach out and cling to you whenever you near the Scotch pine?

And how 'bout those Christmas "specials" this year? Were you as disappointed in most of them as we were? Thank goodness for dear old Perry who always comes across in his inimitable low-keyed style, always in such good taste (two words TV producers have ex-ed out of their vocabulary it seems.)

IN CASE YOU EVER WONDERED where the term "It's a hot potato" originated, here's what we learned.

Children of early American settlers had a problem most history books don't relate. For their parents had been introduced to a new vegetable, an edible root, which they roasted over burning coals. Watching the glowing "pata" cool, hungry children were often too impatient to wait, and grabbed it — burning either their fingers, or what the Irish later called the "potato jaw" (mouth!) But the problem was that if they dropped the sizzling food on the floor, it would smash — angering their frugal parents. So in rural American homes, "hot potato" became a colloquialism for a quandary that was too "hot" to handle.

THE BOTTOM LINE: There's no medicine like hope, no incentive so great, and no tonic so powerful as the expectation of something tomorrow.

MUSICAL NOTES

by Doug Brown

In its modern form, an organ is the largest and most comprehensive musical instrument of them all. Basically, it is a combination of keys, pipes and valves. The pipes are supplied with wind or compressed air by means of bellows and are sounded by means of keys. When the keys are depressed, wind is admitted to the pipes by opening valves or pallets. The instrument has been established since the eighteenth century with the first mention of it in the fourth century when Roman writers referred to it in their works.

If you and your family have been listeners all your lives, turn off the stereo and turn onto a whole new world of fun and creativity with an organ from DOUG BROWN MUSIC, 9219 S. Wayne, Romulus, 941-8484. Now you and your family can make music instead of letting it happen to you. Master Charge and Visa.

Displaced homemakers eligible for vocational scholarships

The vocational education scholarships for special populations, including displaced homemakers and single heads of household are still available for winter term at Schoolcraft College.

"Applications for the grant from the Schoolcraft College district have been surprisingly few," said Jean Christensen, director of the Women's Resource Center. "We haven't publicized the grant extensively as the funds are limited, however, most of the response has been from people living a long distance from the Schoolcraft campuses."

"Community college resources are really intended to serve the residents within each college's district, although some exceptions can be made for 'borderline' residents. I know the need exists, and frankly I'm puzzled as to why so few local residents have applied."

To be eligible, a person must belong to one of four special population groups — displaced homemakers, part-time homemakers-wage earners, single heads of households and non-traditional job trainees.

They must also lack job skills necessary to provide adequate financial support for themselves and dependents living in their homes, lack recent, skilled full-time work experience, and must be receiving no other federal education assistance.

Both men and women are eligible to apply for these scholarships. In addition to assistance by the Women's Resource Center, participants will receive the college's financial aids, counseling and placement services and will be expected to enroll as Schoolcraft College students ($10 application fee).

Ms. Christensen emphasized that the deadline for winter enrollment is approaching, and interested persons should contact the WRC at 591-6400, ext. 430, for applications and individual counseling appointments.

BRONCHITIS & CHIROPRACTIC

WHAT IS BRONCHITIS?

Bronchitis is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes leading to the lungs. Sometimes incorrectly described as "chest cold," bronchitis should not be regarded lightly.

BRONCHITIS AND THE NERVOUS SYSTEM

Bronchitis is a manifestation of an abnormal condition in the body. Sometimes inhaled chemical irritants, excessive smoking, too much alcohol or exhaustion can cause bronchitis symptoms; psychological factors also may aggravate the condition. However it occurs, the body tries to eject an overload of poisons through the mucous membranes which line the internal surfaces of the bronchial tubes.

Doctors of chiropractic have found that when a bronchial condition occurs, the nervous system generally is affected by interference in the transmission of vital nerve impulses from the brain to the bronchial area. Until this interference is removed, there is little chance for the body to restore itself.

Bronchitis usually is accompanied by aching limbs, rising temperature, general malaise and a feeling of tightness in the chest.

Acute bronchitis is the result of an infection. The chest becomes painful and sore. Fever, coughing and expectoration often add to the discomfort. About 6,000,000 Americans per year suffer from acute bronchitis, yet bronchitis and acute bronchitis can be corrected by chiropractic care.

THE SUBLUXATION

The brain is the headquarters of the nervous system. Vital nerve energy is transmitted from the brain to the various parts of the body by means of the spinal cord and the spinal nerve trunks, emanating from the spinal column.

Interference in this energy flow results in a "subluxation," a misalignment of one or more of the spinal vertebrae. This might be due to an accident, muscular tension, even a slight bump or jar which you may not have noticed. This distortion in the impulses being transmitted eventually causes malfunction.

HOW CHIROPRACTIC CAN HELP

Locating the offending subluxation is the specialized skill of the doctor of chiropractic. The chiropractor is trained to determine which segments of the spine have become misaligned.

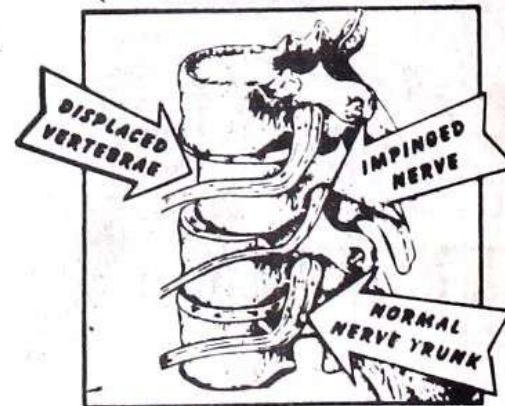

Determining the affected area by examination and spinal analysis, the chiropractor then eliminates the impingement through chiropractic adjustment if indicated.

Once the nervous system is functioning normally, the body is able to restore itself to peak efficiency by its own healing process.

CHIROPRACTIC AND GOOD HEALTH

Don't wait for bronchial symptoms to occur — visit your chiropractor regularly and maintain your good health. Periodic chiropractic care will keep you feeling fit!

CLASSIFIED ADS - We've come a long way

Classified Ads as we know them today have evolved through a maze of time, ever searching for new routes by which people can communicate their wants to other people.

Thus the journey had its beginning in the days of the Egyptian Pharaohs. Papyrus have been found on which were inscribed a form of Classified—mostly advertising for the return of runaway slaves.

Naturally, the first full-fledged Classified ad, as it applies to newspapers, had to await the invention of the press by Johann Gutenberg in the mid-1400s. On June 28, 1660, King Charles II of England advertised in the Mercurious Politicus for the return of his dog. The ad read:

LOST — A smooth black dog, less than a greyhound, belonging to the King's Majesty. If anyone can give notice to His Majesty's servants, or to His Majesty's back stairs, he shall be well-rewarded.

The first Classified ad to appear in the American press was in April of 1704. It was printed by John Campbell in his Boston Newsletter, and it invited readers to place small notices in the weekly newspaper.

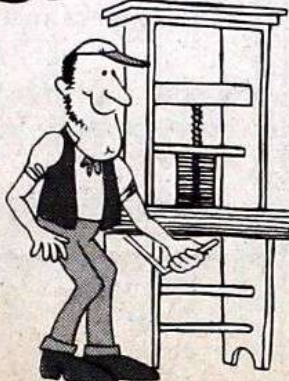

The New York Sun became the first newspaper to group the little ads together. This occurred about 1830.

The first newspaper to group all the little ads together in one section was the New York Sun way back in 1830. By the turn of the century the volume of ads had grown so much that it became necessary to group them under classification headings.

NEW VOTERS
There are about 31,000,000 Americans potentially qualified to vote for the first time in this fall's election, some by virtue of the lowering of the voting age, others by the Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1970, plus those 21 to 24 year olds who have become eligible since the last presidential election.
People are almost unanimous in their approval of Associated Newspapers Classified Ads. That's because they get results they like...cash for good things they no longer need. So when you have something you'd like to COVER

Buddy Rich and his Band roared into the Hyatt Regency December 31 to give the rhythmic heave-ho to the Old Year and thunderously welcome the next decade. Also helping to swing and rock in the 80's was another great jazz drummer, J.C. Heard and his Jazz Quartet; Johnny Trudell and his Top Brass; Chet Bogan's Dixieland Band; and the Other Brothers and their Disco Show.

In Michigan, that is

From Paradise to Hell

From Paradise to Hell — Michigan, that is — we're starting the new year out right, with a blizzard of people pleasin' activities and events for every age, according to the Michigan Calendar of Travel Events.

Leading the list of January happenings is Tip-Up Town U.S.A., with two big weekends of 'family style' fun on the ice of Houghton Lake, January 18-20 and 26-27.

Fishing contests are just a part of the big picture.

The Grand Parade, Saturday, January 18, leads visitors into the 'village on ice' and ice sculptures, games, contests, sky diving and hang gliding demos, and activities solely for the amazement and amusement of all. The second weekend is geared to snowmobiling families, with safaris, treasure hunts, and poker runs. Add cross country skiing, motorcycle races on the ice, a snowgolf tourney and country music shows, and you've got a 'tom foolery' weekend that can only be made in Michigan. Tip-Up Town's bylaws are quite specific ... clearly stating the purpose of the Village on Ice to be — "the promotion of bigger lies, hilarity, tom foolery and good will."

Contests, games, ice sculptures, cross country skiing and other snowy antics are waiting at other Winter Festivals in other areas of the state during January. There's the Winter Festival at Buchanan, January 12-13 and two big weekends of Winter Carnival fun at Baldwin, January 12-13 and 26-27. Speed skating and sleigh rides are two of the attractions at the Wayne Winter Festival, January 26-27. Snowmobile contests and tobogganing top the list of festive activities at the Saugatuck-Douglas Winter Festival, and Ypsilanti's Winter Carnival at Jyro Park, both set for January 26-27.

The city that put America on wheels unveils what's new for the eighties during two big shows at Cobo Hall, Detroit, this month. This year's edition of "Autorama," January 4-6 spotlights sports cars and vans, then January 12-20, it's the 64th Detroit Auto Show. More four-wheeled fantasies will be on display January 18-20, at the Lansing Civic Center, during the Custom Auto Show.

Michigan's entertainment roster promises an exciting, star-studded month. For starters, Roger Williams joins the Detroit Symphony Weekender Pops Series, January 11 and 13 at Ford Auditorium. And, the 'Queen of Scat,' Ella Fitzgerald, will be backed by the Kalamazoo Symphony, January 25, for an evening to remember in Miller Auditorium.

At the University Auditorium, on the campus of Michigan State University in East Lansing, the Vienna Choirboys will be in concert January 15, followed by the fancy footwork of the Krasnayarsk Dance Company of Siberia, January 17. Musical masterworks courtesy of the Juilliard String Quartet, January 18, and the classic choreography of the Eliot Feld Ballet, January 30, close out the month at Michigan State. Detroit's Music Hall presents Jennifer Muller and "The Works," January 23-26; and Kalamazoo's Miller Auditorium will host the Vienna Choirboys, January 18.

Michigan's winter sports activities won't leave you out in the cold, regardless of your inclinations. For snowmobilers, there's the Thunder Bay 250, enduro snowmobile race, January 12, Alpena. Time trials for the '250' are set for January 4-7. If you're a safari fan, join fellow "Beelers" and trail riders in Cadillac, January 5; White Cloud, January 19; Tawas City, January 20-21; or the annual Moose Jaw Safari, at Harbor Springs, January 12. There'll be a Sno-Fun Weekend at Kalkaska, January 12-13 and the Mardi Gras de Snow is a super snowmobiling weekend for all ages at Paradise, January 18-20.

The sled dog racing season is in full swing across Michigan, with huskies 'mushing' ahead in Ludington, January 5-6; Traverse City, January 12-13; Lansing, January 19-20; Pincney, January 26-27; and International Sled Dog competition at Kalkaska, January 26-27.

Cross country skiers anxious to test their skills won't want to miss the 4th annual North American Vasa Race, January 26 in Traverse City. Skiers of all levels of ability are encouraged to participate, with both Elite and Citizen classes open. Also scheduled for January 26 is the Avalanche Ski Classic, at Boyne City. There'll be racing for all ages and classes.

It's 'snow' wonder winter in Michigan is a popular play season. Don't miss any of the fun and games coming up in the month ahead. Write for your free copy of the Michigan Calendar of Travel Events, available from the Travel Bureau, Michigan Department of Commerce, P.O. Box 30226, Lansing, Michigan, 48909.

Meadow Brook announces cast

Meadow Brook Theatre's Artistic Director Terence Kilburn has just announced the cast for "A Moon For the Misbegotten" which will open a four week run on Thursday, January 3, 1980 at 8:30 p.m. on the campus of Oakland University near Rochester.

Eugene O'Neill's last completed drama, "A Moon For the Misbegotten," is set in front of a rundown Connecticut farmhouse in 1923. The play fully develops three pivotal characters: Phil Hogan, the wily and cunning tenant farmer; Josie, his lusty and unbridled daughter who tries to give the impression of a wanton but is not; and James Tyrone, Jr., a dissolute and drunken ham actor who owns their farm. There is a connection between "A Moon For the Misbegotten" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night" in that Tyrone is the playwright's older brother, about ten years after we see him in the latter play.

The first part of the play is primarily comedy and in the character of Phil Hogan, a hard-drinking and cantankerous old Irishman who tries to bring the couple (James and Josie) together and save the farm for himself.

As New York Post critic Clive Barnes describes the plot, "it is an encounter between two people under a moon. They are two people who should be in love and most certainly are. They are two people who represent the only possibility, each for the other, of happiness and earthly redemption. But, fears are too much for them and they part..."

Robert Donley, who played the role of Sir Oliver in Meadow Brook's season opener, "The School for Scandal" this fall, will portray Phil Hogan the irascible Irishman. A newcomer to the Meadow Brook stage, Lisa McMillan, will play the indomitable heroine, Josie Hogan. Most recently she was seen at Stage-West in Springfield, Massachusetts, where she appeared in "The Night of the Iguana." Prior to that she played Viola in "Twelfth Night" at New Jersey's George Street Theatre. Last summer at the Wayside Theatre in Virginia she portrayed Mrs. Manningham in "Angel Street" and Stella in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Opening week performances for "A Moon For the Misbegotten" are scheduled at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, 2 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. on Saturday and 6:30 p.m. on Sundays and 2 p.m. on Wednesdays. The theatre is dark on Mondays.

Tickets for "A Moon For the Misbegotten," which will run from January 3 through January 27, 1980, may be purchased at Hudson's or by calling the Meadow Brook Theatre box office, 377-3300.

Detroit Autorama

The Detroit Autorama, the largest and richest of the 160 custom car shows on the International Show Car Association circuit, opens Friday (Jan. 4) at Cobo Hall with over 400 gleaming street rods, pickup trucks, race vehicles, antique cars and even off shore power boats on display. In addition, a number of TV stars and celebrities also will be on hand making personal appearances and signing autographs.

According to Dick Forton, Autorama Show Chairman, the 1980 Autorama promises to be better than ever because of the high number of new vehicles entered in the competition.

"This year, we have more all-new cars built from the ground up than I remember ever having in years past," said Forton, who has been involved with the show for more than 20 years, both as a judge and as chairman.

"These new cars will be competing for the Don Riddler Award which is given to the best all new custom vehicle shown for the first time. To the custom car builder, the Riddler Award is the most coveted award he can receive. With the number of possible Riddler contenders coming here, the Detroit Autorama should be the top show in the country in 1980."

In addition to dozens of entries from Michigan, Ohio and Ontario, car builders are coming to the Detroit Autorama from New York, Arizona and even California, said Forton.

Autorama

Not all the vehicles in Autorama are individual entries competing for points and awards. Some are professionally built "feature" cars or trucks that are included because they often represent the ultimate in this automotive art form called customizing.

This year's feature vehicles include the Charlie's Angels Van, a shocking pink van with pink crushed velvet interior and white shag carpeting, equipped with a loungebed that opens to reveal a display of hand guns and rifles. Another is the Cartercar Peanut Rod, a contemporary version of the original Michigan-made 1909 Cartercar, only this one is finished in bright orange and yellow and powered by a 2000 cc fuel injected engine. The third vehicle is a $100,000 customized Clenet, one of only 250 of this model ever produced.

The 1980 Autorama also boasts an outstanding celebrity line up. This year's TV personalities include Greg Evigan, 25, star of NBC's "BJ and the Bear" and 10 year old Adam Rich who plays Nicholas Bradford on the ABC-TV series, "Eight is Enough." Other celebrities include Playboy magazine's 25th Anniversary Playmate, Candy Loving, and "Miss November, 1979," Sylvie Garant. All will be on hand throughout Autorama to meet their fans and sign autographs.

The 28th annual Autorama opens Friday at 5:00 p.m. and runs until 11:00 p.m. Hours for Saturday and Sunday are noon to 11:00 p.m. Admission is $4.50 for adults and $1.50 for children 6-12 with children 5 and under free.

Sponsored by the Michigan Hot Rod Association, the Autorama is Detroit's largest weekend event. Last year, a record 151,000 fans packed into Cobo Hall from between 5 p.m. Friday when it opened until it closed Sunday evening. Autorama officials said they expect a similar crowd this year to see the unusual cars and trucks on display and to meet their favorite TV stars and celebrities.

ARIES March 21-April 20

This week is perfect for showing off. You are recognized socially so be at your best. The holiday provides an opportunity to take the spotlight and include others in it with you.

TAURUS April 21-May 21

There is of course a lot happening this week and many people around you attract a lot of attention. Don't be depressed if you aren't made a big deal of; your turn comes over the weekend.

GEMINI May 22-June 21

Don't shrug anything off, tackle any problems straight on and get them over with. Don't let misunderstandings dampen the holiday spirit. Tempers around you are touchy, be easy.

CANCER June 22-July 23

Christmas is very special for everyone, but special days for you are occurring around the 23rd and 24th. Hold close to your those ideals that make you very special to another.

LEO July 24-August 23

There's a lot happening in all areas and you are taxed to say the least. Just before Christmas, you're bound to feel a bit depressed. Don't spread your gloom, get involved in the holiday.

VIRGO August 24-Sept. 23

The past tensions lift this week and you are in the perfect spirit to celebrate the season. Be appreciative and show it. You have a lot of friends that need a pat on the back now.

LIBRA Sept. 24-Oct. 23

It isn't wise for you to travel, but if you must, take extra time and precautions. Celebrating at home is the best idea you could have, consider it carefully. Welcome friends and family.

SCORPIO Oct. 24-Nov. 22

You have an inner voice that should be heard right now. The difference between right and wrong is within you. Don't put anything off. Fulfill promises and obligations on time.

SAGITTARIUS Nov. 23-Dec. 21

You have some obstacles or problems this week, don't insist that others help you as repayment for something you've done. You can work things out yourself, just try with determination.

CAPRICORN Dec. 22-Jan. 20

With emotions running at their peak this week, a compliment or congratulations comes from one you never expected it from. Be gracious and warm. A new relationship can start now.

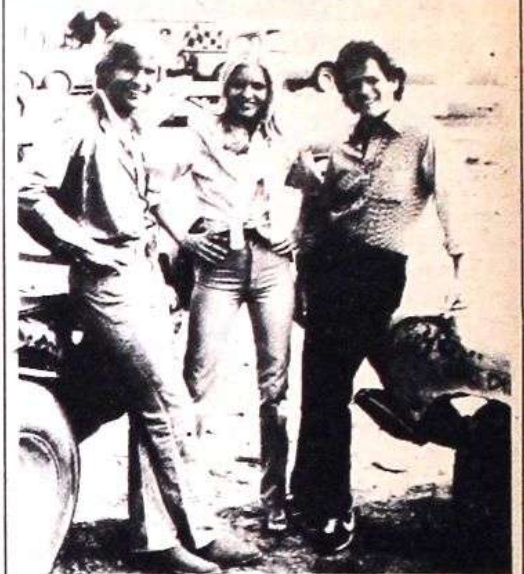

AQUARIUS Jan 21-Feb. 19

Things have been changing a lot lately and you've grown along with the changes. The holidays are a celebration for the meaning of them and a personal success for yourself.

PISCES Feb. 20-March 20

You are down this week, thinking too much about the past and wrong things. Look back and see how far you've come instead of where you've been or where you should be.
